"The Nearer the Bone, the Sweeter the Meat."

It's an old and homely adage and finds an application here.

The maker of merchandise has reached the end of his Summer "tether."

His season is about over; yours has just begun.

He's anxious to sell what is left of his made up product at almost any reasonable sacrifice.

We're watching your interests in this matter, and as a result have made purchases that will surprise you by their price cheapness.

Makers of Shirt Waists

Are straining every nerve to get rid of the balance of their season's product. It's a big chance for the consumer to buy these dainty Summer garments at a big drop from early season's prices. At least we thought so when we cornered these lots. It's a case of quick sale, and first come, first served.

YACHTS COLLIDE

During a Race for the Vice Commodore's Cup.

The Crew of the Isolde Are Knocked Overboard and Baron Von Sedwitz, of Prussia, is Killed.

SOUTH SEA, Aug. 18.—Ailsa, Britannia, Satanita and Meteor started this morning in a race for the vice commodore's cup and twenty-five pounds. Not long after the start Meteor collided with Baron Von Sedwitz's American yacht Isolde. The later was dismasted, several of her crew were knocked overboard and Baron Von Sedwitz was so seriously injured by falling rigging that he was taken to the hospital at Clyde unconscious.

The accident caused considerable excitement and confusion ashore and afloat as it was at first reported that it was Emperor William's yacht which had been dismasted. All the members of the crew of Isolde who were knocked overboard were saved by the boats from the other yachts.

Baron Von Sedwitz died shortly after having been removed to the hospital. He was a grand privy councillor and a member of both the reichstag and the Prussian diet. He has been in parliament for about twenty-five years; was a leading authority on finance in politics, and was leader of the free conservative party. Although comparatively a young man he was unanimously recommended in 1890 by the state cabinet for the then vacant post of minister of finance, but was not appointed because the emperor had taken a fancy to Dr. Miquel.

Particulars of the disaster show that in passing the committee boat, the big yachts overtook the twenty raters. The Britannia and Meteor were then almost abreast of the Isolde and narrowly escaped a collision. The Britannia suddenly shifted her help to avoid the Saint, when the Meteor struck the Isolde, sweeping her from stem to stern with her bowsprit. The Isolde's main mast and sails crashed overboard and carried with them nearly all of the crew of the Isolde and crushing Baron Von Sedwitz. The Britannia and Meteor immediately hove to and lowered their boats for the assistance of the men struggling in the water. The Ailsa and several other yachts followed their example. Baron Von Sedwitz, when pulled out of the water, was found to have a bad cut on the head and was bleeding from the ears. He was taken on board a steam yacht, which immediately made for Ryde. Ceit died while on board the yacht and not shortly after reaching the hospital, as at first announced. Isolde, in addition to losing her mast, etc, had her bows stove in and was towed back to South Sea. Both races were abandoned. The Isolde is a twenty rater, built by the Herreschoffs, and was originally the property of Prince Leopold, of Germany, for whom she was built, and subsequently sold to Baron Von Sedwitz. She was taken to England in April of last year. She is a twin yacht of Howard Gould's Niagara, which she has defeated several times.

ROYALTY WILL WED.

Betrothal of Prince Emanuel to Princess Helene.

Heir Apparent to the Throne of Italy Wins the Hand of the Daughter of the Reigning Prince of Montenegro.

CETTIJE, Montenegro, Aug. 18.—Victorio Emanuel, prince of Naples, eldest son and heir apparent of the king of Italy, is betrothed to Princess Helene of Montenegro, third daughter of the reigning prince of Montenegro.

The princess, who was born January 8, 1873, is beautiful, of fine physique, highly educated, and is not accustomed to luxury or even to much comfort. In fact, she hardly knows what it is to have pin money or an allowance. She has been brought up in the style of a Highland chieftain's daughter of the last century and was at one time reported as engaged to king Milan, of Servia.

The prince of Naples, whose matrimonial prospects have been commented upon in newspapers for years, is a young man who at one time or other has been reported engaged to nearly every unmarried princess in Europe, including Princess Maude of Wales and Princess Alexandria of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha.

He first met Princess Helene at Venice and was greatly struck with her beauty. As the princess was held in reserve as a wife for the present czar in case the Hessian match was not consummated, the czar, naturally, is greatly interested in her future and will in all probability bestow upon Montenegro further marks of his approbation, which may or may not take the form of arms, ammunition, etc, as was the case not long ago.

The prince of Naples, it is well known, has entertained a strong dislike for marriage. It has been pointed out that he is not blessed with a strong constitution, although it is not known that there is anything organically wrong about him. But perhaps his morbid sentiment on the subject can best be expressed in words attributed to him when discussing his health. He said:

"I shall never marry." When pressed for a reason, he replied: "I will not give Italy a hunchback king."

His uncle, Prince Oddone, was a hunchback and otherwise deformed, and this seems to have made a serious impression on the sensitive mind of the young prince, who otherwise is pronounced to be a most amiable and worthy young man.

The objection of the prince of Naples to marriage has been so strong that speculation had it that he would resign his succession to the throne in favor of King Humbert's nephew, the duke of Acosta, who was married last year to Princess Helene, of Orleans, daughter of the late count of Paris, and who has been looked upon in some quarters as the possible future king of Italy.

TWO SUICIDES.

William Miles Was Sick and Despondent.

J. C. Williams Went Visiting in Montana and While There Killed Himself.

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 18.—William Massick Miles, a well known club and society man, committed suicide last night in his rooms at the Rainer club. Miles came of a prominent South Carolina family and his father was for two terms attorney general of the state. Despondency over his ill health is believed to have prompted his suicide.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Aug. 18.—Early yesterday morning J. C. Williams, a visitor from Montana, stabbed himself in the breast four times with a knife. Failing to end his life in that manner, he jumped head first into a deep hole and broke his neck.

NOT ENTHUSIASTIC

Are the Gold Democrats of Vermont.

A Call for a State Convention Results in the Meeting of a Small Number.

BELLOWS FALLS, Vt., Aug. 18.—The state convention of gold standard democrats, called for today, promised little in the way of enthusiasm or even business at 11:30 o'clock this forenoon, the hour appointed for calling the convention to order. At that hour, besides the delegates who reside here, only a dozen persons were present. No details had been arranged previous to the arrival of the delegates and it was decided to await the possible arrival of more delegates on later trains.

PRACTICALLY ENDED

Is the Strike of the Express Men.

The Manager of the Company Announces That He Has All the Men He Needs.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—At the offices of the Adams Express company in this city it was said today that the strike inaugurated Monday morning is practically at an end. More than the usual number of wagons, it was said, were out today and business was done with the usual expedition. The strikers, however, profess to believe that they will yet carry their point. They allege that last night only three car loads were carried out from Jersey City, although there were goods sufficient to fill nine cars in the warehouses there.

STRUCK IT RICH.

E. W. Eakin in This City to Receive Payment for a Mine.

Today a transaction by which $15,000 came into possession of E. W. Eakin took place in this city. It was the transfer of a lead and zinc mine near Joplin, M., owned by Mr. Eakin and which was purchased by a western syndicate. The sale was made through Hugh McDonald, of San Francisco, as agent. Mr. McDonald arrived yesterday from Joplin and Mr. Eakin came in this morning from Montpelier, Ind., where he has been located of late. The sale was somewhat of a bonanza to Mr. Eakin, as the property was purchased by him for a song before it was developed into a mine.

While in the city Mr. Eaken was the guest of his friend, Dr. J. J. Ogle.

TEN MEN PERISH.

Sad Fate of the Bark Flora Ford.

Fire Breaks Out and Envelops the Ship, Driving the Men to Sea in Boats.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 18.—According to private advices received in this city today ten of the crew of twenty-one men of the British bark Flora P. Ford, which was burned at sea several weeks ago, perished. The vessel, although sailing under the British flag, was owned principally in this city. She sailed from New Castle, N. S. W., April 22 for Mantila with aoout 2,000 tons of coal, and on June 8 in latitude 6° N., longtitude 13° E., she took fire, presumably through spontaneous combustion. The flames soon got beyond control, and the crew was compelled to take to the boats. Captain Oscar Smith, a brother to Captain Smith, of this city, took to one boat with ten men, and the mate with nine other members of the crew got in the second boat. Whether or not the two boats kept company with each other is mere conjecture. Captain Smith, however, with his ten men, succeeded in being saved, but nothing has ever been heard from the chief mate and his crew. The sea at the time was rough and the probabilities are that the boat was capsized and all were lost. There are hopes, however, that the shipwrecked mariners may have been picked up by some passing vessel and will yet be heard from.

MAY GIVE UP THE TURF

Lucky Baldwin Has Bad Luck This Season,

And This Year of Misfortune May Induce Him to Abandon the Race Track.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 18.—It is reported in the east that Lucky Baldwin may retire from the turf. This story has been placed in circulation as a result of the bad luck his string had early in the season. His youngsters, all of whom were by Emperor Norfolk and The Hook, became sick soon after reaching St. Louis and were very slow about rounding into form. Recently, however, they have been winning some races at Latonia and Detroit.

Baldwin has always had marvelous success in racing, so that a year of misfortune is something to which he is unaccustomed. His breeding operations have always turned out well, however, and his sale of Rey Del Carerres and Rey El Santa Anita to Mr. Croker netted him a tidy sum last year. It is settled that he will not abandon the breeding of race horses. Whether he will discontinue racing or not is something he will decide during the winter. His decision will probably depend a great deal on whether he can secure a competent trainer and jockey.

ROTHACKER DEAD.

Dies From Wounds Received From Lundy.

The Prisoner Claims Self-Defense, Though He is Charged With Murder.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Aug. 18.—Fred S. Rothacker, who was stabbed by Attorney Charles Lundy, on Mount Auburn street early yesterday morning, died this morning at the hospital from the effects of the wound. The charge against Lundy will be murder, but it is likely that a case of self-defense will be shown. Lundy is an athlete and it was surprising to his friends that he resorted to a knife when attacked by the Rothackers, one of whom, at least, was intoxicated. It now appears that he was at the time suffering from an acute case of piles and was in no condition to meet even a single antagonist with natural weapons.

G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT.

St. Paul Making Big Preparations for It.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 18.—But two weeks remain for the preliminary work for the thirtieth encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic and the local arrangements are almost completed so far as the local committees are concerned. Letters thus far received warrant the estimate that not less than 30,000 veterans will be in line on the day of the big parade. The parade will be one of, and for the veterans only, the commander-in-chief having ordered positively that there shall be no carriages in line.

Many inquiries have been received as to the time Commander-in-Chief Walker will arrive in St. Paul and the announcement is made officially that he will not arrive until the morning of Tuesday, Sept. 1.

Already nearly 200 reunions of various army organizations have been booked to be held during encampment week.

Gov. Chase's Estate.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 18.—The administrator of the estate of the late Governor Chase made his final report yesterday. After the debts were paid the widow received $612. Governor Chase had invested heavily in mining stocks that are considered worthless.

FREE SILVER CONVERTS.

Two Prominent Logansport Republicans Leave Their Party.

LOGANSPORT, Ind., Aug. 18.—Among the recent converts to free silver is Professor Hensley Neff, brother to Dr. J. N. Neff, of this city. Mr. Neff is one of the best known teachers of this county and has heretofore been identified with the republican party.

Another notable convert is W. P. Ward, of Kokomo, treasurer of the Howard county republican committee. He announced his determination Saturday to support Bryan and Sewall and resigned his place on the republican committee.

TEBEAU VICTORIOUS.

Comes Out of the Contest With Flying Colors.

The Court Decides That the $200 Fine Was Unjust and Should Not be Paid.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug. 18.—Captain Oliver Tebeau, of the local base ball team, came out of his memorable fight against the National league today with flying colors. Judge Noble rendered his decision in the Tebeau injunction case this morning. Only a few fans were on hand and even President Robison, who had followed the entire proceeding from the start, was not in attendance at the closing scene. But when the ruling of the court was imparted to him, he deemed himself the happiest man on earth. Besides declaring the fine illegal the court ruled that he would grant a noninjunction to prevent the league from either interfering with the Cleveland team or its captain, but for the fact that the same objects were assured by continuing the original restraining order in force, and that more wrong might be done than obviated by any other course. The object of the injunction prayed for in the petition was to prevent the national league from collectiong an alleged wrongful $200 fine assessed against the local captain or barring the player for participating in championship games.

DEBS' VIEWS.

He Thinks Sewall Should Give Way to Watson.

"Unless the Maine Man Withdraws, the Success of the Ticket is Not Assured."

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 18.—Eugene V. Debs has written, under date of August 6, a letter to George P. Garrison, of Chadron, Neb., setting forth his views on silver and fusion between the democrats and populists. Mr. Debs states his attitude clearly. He says, referring to the fusion and the present condition of the national tickets:

"Without the support of the populists the democratic party could not win. The populists, animated by patriotic motives, accorded first honors to the democrats, and the democrats, if they are animated by similar motives, will now accord the populists second place by placing Mr. Watson on the ticket with Mr. Bryan. Mr. Sewall can well afford to step aside to effect this union of the two great forces and insure the election of the people's candidates. Such action on the part of Mr. Sewall would make him a far greater man than the vice president. Failing to accord the people's party such recognition by giving them a place on the national ticket, there will de dissatisfaction which may culminate in open revolt, especially in the southern states, where populists have suffered all sorts of indignities at the hands of the Bourbon democrats, and this may cost Mr. Bryan his election and put McKinley and goldbugism in power. For the mere offices we care nothing, for we scorn spoils in any form. But for the principle involved, we care and have a right to care much. There is a vast difference between Mr. Bryan and the democratic party. If the latter's only ambition is to swallow the people's party so as to place them in power and get possession of the offices, their design will and should be thwarted. I would far rather see McKinley elected than have another democratic administration."

BURT ARRESTED.

Found Loitering Around the Board of Trade.

Carried Evidences of Guilt in the Shape of a Blood Stained Knife.

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—Eugene Burt, who is wanted in Austin, Texas, for the murder of his wife and two children about a month ago, was arrested in the Rialto building today. The dirk with which his crime was committed was found on his person, and blood stains were still visible on his straw hat. His arrest was brought about through information furnished the police by M. J. Pointdexter, a former resident of Austin, who recognized Burt yesterday loitering around the open board of trade. Burt admitted he was the man wanted.

Gail Hamilton's Funeral.

HAMILTON, Mass., Aug. 18.—The funeral of Abigail Dodge, "Gail Hamilton," will take place from Hamilton Congregational church at 3:30 p. m. on Thursday. Rev. Mr. Nichols, an old friend of the family, will officiate. It is understood that the family are willing that the villagers and personal friends of Miss Dodge shall attend, but do not countenance the idea of a public funeral.

To Suppress Gambling.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 18.—It is announced that the new governor of the federal district will undertake to suppress gambling here. With every new administration of affairs in this city the same reform is mooted, but nothing is ever accomplished.

THE CROPS OF EUROPE.

Generally Favorable Are the Prospects as Announced.

In Great Britain Wheat Will Approximate Thirty-two Bushels Per Acre--Showings From Other Nations.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Generally favorable prospects for the crops of Europe are announced in the report of the European agent of the agricultural department. The report follows by countries:

Great Britain—The harvest is half over, and it is believed that wheat will closely approximate thirty-two bushels per acre, the highest average for many years. The total harvest will approximate 56,000,000 bushels, the area being only about 1,750,000 acres. The barley crop will be very good and is generally in very good condition. Oats are expected to fall considerably below the average. The hay crop is seriously deficient. A continuance of the summer drought through the autumn will result in such scarcity of feeding stuffs as to lessen materially the value and number of cattle and sheep. The first pocket of this season's English hops was sold in London on the 27th of July for $58.30 the hundred weight, (112 pounds).

France—The first report as to crop prospects issued by the minister of agriculture states that winter wheat is looking well or very well in nearly all the departments where autumn sown cereals are grown. Spring wheat is reported as good or very good. The harvest will be completed early, and it is confidently expected that it will somewhat exceed that of last year, 340,000,000 bushels.

Germany—The wheat harvest is beginning. The lowest estimate is 96,000,000, the highest 112,000,000 bushels. The barley crop is reported to be exceptionably good, both in quantity and condition. Rye is a good average. The potato crop, an important one in this country, is reported as average, at least.

Spain and Portugal—The harvest has been most irregular, but the minimum estimate of the wheat product of the Iberian penisula is 50,000,000 bushels, of which Portugal cannot produce more than 40,000,000 bushels.

Italy—The wheat crop is probably something more than average. This means about 75,000,000 bushels. Other crops are a good average.

Austria-Hungary—The return from all but the southern provinces are good and the prospects is for an average crop of wheat and barley. The wheat estimate ranges from 175,000,000 to 225,000,000 bushels.

Roumania—An average crop of wheat is expected and with average August weather corn will yield a big crop.

Russia—The harvest in the southern part will be delayed by moisture and cool weather during the end of July, particularly the barley harvest. Reports from the southwest indicate that wheat will be under average, but elsewhere throughout the whole of the country a good average seems to be expected.

Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Norway and Sweeden report average crops.

WORLD'S COINAGE OF SILVER.

During the Year 1895 it Amounted to $123,572,200.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—From official information received by the treasury department from twenty-one countries, the coinage of silver during the calendar year 1895 amounted in the aggregate to $123,572,200.

Of this sum $13,602,200 was recoinage. Deducting this sum from the total coinage gives the coinage of silver from new bullion in 1895 as $100,069,000. The country coining the largest amount of siver in 1895 was Mexico, with a coinage of $24,832,350, followed closely by Japan with a coinage of $23,883,500; next comes China with $8,253,340; Spain, $7,969,500; Great Britain, $5,821,151; United States, $5,698,000; Austria-Hungary, $5,299,000; Peru, $4,073,000; Russia, $3,554,000; Ecuador, $2,500,000; Germany, $1,826,000.

The silver coinage executed by Great Britain during the year for her colonies was: For Canada, $1,158,630; for Hong Kong, $2,200,000; for Straits settlements, $450,500, a total of $3,808,130.

France coined for Iddo-China $6,092,000 in silver and for Morrocco $345,600.

During the year 1895 the United States recoined the largest amount of silver, $4,850,000, followed by Austria-Hungary, with a coinage of $2,318,500; England, $2,160,000; Germany, $1,825,000; Russia, $642,500; India, $484,500.

From January 1 to August 1, 1895, the coinage of silver dollars by the mints of the United States was $8,562,412, while the coinage of silver dollars from 1792 to 1873 aggregated $8,031,238 only.

The world's product of silver during the calendar year 1895 is estimated to have been $226,000,000. The amount of new bullion used in the coinage so far as known was $100,069,000, and from reports received from twelve countries the amount used in the industrial arts was $42,000,000, while the exports to the east amounted to $37,500,000, making the total disposition of the world's silver product for 1895, so far as known, $179,559,000, which would leave $46,330,000 for coin and use in the arts by the countries from which no reports have been received.

William Swope, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Swope, of East Lewa street, has reason to remember his twelfth birthday for some years. Yesterday he had a party in honor of the anniversary and after supper the host and his guests repaired to the garden in the rear of the house to play, and while thus engaged, Willie fell from a tree and fractured the bones of one of his arms. Dr. J. W. McCausland reduced the fracture.

WAS REALISTIC.

The "Last Days of Pompeii" at Centlivres' Park.

An Impressive Exhibition Seen Under the Canopy of the Heavens--A Grand Display of Fireworks.

Realistic, impressive, and interesting was the production at Centlivre's park last night of Pain's summer night carnival, "The Last Day's of Pompeii," and, notwithstanding the fact that it was a cool evening and the Robinson-Franklin circus on the jail flats drew thousands to that tented amusement, there was a large audience present to witness the exhibition.

The production has been seen before in this city and its representation last night by the large company, under the management of Mr. O. E. Skiff, was equal to its former which was so universally admired and which drew people here from many neighboring towns.

Before the semi-circle of seats was the representation of ancient Pompeii, with dark Vesuvius looming up threateningly in the background. The mountain scene was one of real artistic merit, and riveted the attention of the people while light remained. In the center was a miniature lake, which played a conspicuous part in the pyrotechnical display. The program opened with a representation of Bulwer's romance. Crowds of priests, civilians, etc., marched and played in mimic form the life of ancient Greece. All were then arrayed before the temples, where they watched the hippodrome feats and specialties. There were races—chariot, hurdle, etc.; statuesque work, acrobatic feats of strength, etc. The spectacular romance was then resumed until old Vesuvius, as out of patience with the revelry and idolatry upon which he looked, suddenly belched forth his flood of fire. The populace ran hither and thither in mimic affright, the temples tumbled down and the air was split with a succession of explosions. It was a brilliant scene and no less beautiful than wonderful. Then followed a grand display of fireworks. Beginning with rockets, showers and the like, the operators worked to the large set pieces, of which there were about a dozen. The artificial lake was covered with water pieces that gushed out streams of golden fire like so many geysers.

The performance will be repeated tonight. Tonight is ladies' night and a pyrotechnic portrait of the handsomest lady in Fort Wayne will be presented.

Such persons will be apprehended as fast as possible and reported.

Mr. Smith was for many years an engineer on the Wabash railroad but lost his position at the time of the A. R. U. strike.

The Murderer Escapes and is Now at Large--Several Arrests on Suspicion--Details of a Shocking Crime.

Elmer E Ferguson, a laborer, of 209 East Jefferson street, was the victim of a most foul murder at the Pompeii exhibition last night, and the assassin who committed the crime escaped and is still at large.

The tragedy was enacted in the dressing room tents of Pain's big show at Centlivre park shortly before the opening of the performence.

Ferguson was one of several hundred from this city who responded to the call of the show management for supernumeraries and was assigned to a silent part which required him to don a costume of a Roman soldier. By some misunderstanding he got hold of the wrong costume, and the mistake was discovered by Oscar Kahlert, property man for the show. Kahlert, it is said, was abusive in his language, which Ferguson resented and a quarrel was precipitated, ending in a fight between the two men.

Several attaches of the show rallied to the assistance of Kahlert, among them Charles Sannard, a tent hand Saunard, in a frenzy of rage picked up a heavy stake and, rushing to the spot, dealt Ferguson a cruel blow on the side of the head. The victim of the murderous assault dropped like a stone.

While the tragedy was being enacted several Fort Wayne parties also acting temporarily in the performance were seized with a panic and scattered before the infuriated murderer, fearing violence to themselves and not daring to interfere. The first to recover to the full realization of the situation were Jasper Waikle, brickmason residing on Custer avenue, and J. W. Snyder, a carpenter who lives at 199 Broadway. These men were acquainted with Ferguson. Together they made an effort to capture Sannard, who after delivering the fatal blow made his escape from the scene. The efforts of Waikle and Snyder in this direction were fruitless as the murderer had been lost sight of in the crowd.

Attention was now paid to the victim of assault, who lay bleeding and senseless upon the ground, and whose life was fast ebbing away. Manager Skiff, of the show, and Louis Heilbroner summoned Dr. Rosenthal and the officers to the grounds as early as possible, and in the meantime the eight officers who were detailed on duty at the park were furnished a description of the murderer and instructed to use their best efforts to apprehend him. When the physician arrived he pronounced the injured man as being beyond the aid of medical skill as he was then dying. Ferguson was carefully lifted into the patrol wagon and while being conveyed to Hope hospital he breathed his last. His father, who was apprised of the terrible deed, awaited his son's coming at the hospital. When told of the boy's death he wept like a child.

Superintendent Gorsline and Sheriff Clausmeier dispatched their men to various parts of the city and on the outskirts.

The show management assisted the officers in every way possible. Immediately after the performance a roll call showed that every member of the company was present except Sannard. Notwithstanding this fact several arrests were made on suspicion, and Oscar Kahlert, the property man, with whom Ferguson first had trouble, was taken into custody, Deputy Sheriff Summers making the arrest. Upon information of Wm Parent, of this city, an attache of the show named James McCormick was placed under arrest by Decective Cooling and Deputy Sheriff Ryan. B. W. Galloway, living at the corner of Lewis and Monroe streets, also identifies McCormick as the murderer, but their opinion differs materially with that of other witnesses who say that Sannard wielded the club that dealt the death blow. McCormick was held to have his hearing this afternoon before Mayor Scherer. He is a night watchman, having joined the show five weeks ago at Sioux City, Iowa.

Sergeant Daseler arrested one Thos. F. Mason on Lafayette street on suspicion but there was evidence to show that he was the wrong man. Mason was a tramp and yesterday secured temporary employment with the show. A charge of intoxication was preferred against him and he is now in jail for that offense.

Sheriff Clausmeier and Deputy Summers, while trying to search one of Pain's cars at the south depot, were confronted by Charles Scholcraft, a colored porter, who interfered with them and became so impudent that he was arrested and fined $25 this morning. Scholcraft claimed to be an employe of the railroad company, but strange to say, he was asking the show management to bail him out of jail today.

Elmer Ferguson, the murdered man, is twenty-four years old. He came to this city from Warsaw seven years ago. His father, James Ferguson, is a blacksmith by trade, but owing to his advanced age has followed no occupation for several years. The dead son, Eimer, and two others, Walter and John, jr., were the support of the family. Elmer had been employed on the water works at odd times, but had no regular job. He was not a quarrelsome fellow, but once aroused would prove a formidable opponent, as he was a powerfully built man.

The remains were taken charge of by Funeral Director Peltier and today conveyed home.

As THE SENTINEL goes to press Kahlert and McCormick are being tried before Mayor Scherer, and Pain's manager has retained Attorney W. H. Shambaugh to defend them. Kahlert is being tried on the charge of assault with intent to kill.

THE MURDERER.

He is described as a man about twenty-six years old, five feet, seven inches tall and weighing about 170 pounds. Dark complexion, small dark moustache. Had on black coat and pants and brown soft hat. The description has been sent to the chiefs of police and sheriffs within a radius of 200 miles of Fort Wayne.

ANOTHER MAN'S PANTS

Found on Frank Schohay's Legs by an Officer.

Frank is Arrested--Little Lydia Burns Makes a Serious Charge Against John Payne--Police Notes.

Officer Bob Dickson has a keen eye for stolen property. At an early hour this morning Officer Dickson saw a pair of pants moving along the street. Inside the pants was a pair of legs and the legs belonged to one Frank Schohay. Those pants were the property of Frank Randolph and as the officer had a description of the stolen property, pants legs and man were soon safely behind the bars. Although the evidence was convincing to prove that Schohay stole the goods, he professed innocence of the theft and told a very crooked story. When cross-questioned by Prosecutor Doughman he contradicted himself several times. The mayor bound him over in the sum of $200.

Lydia Burns, daughter of Mrs. A. Burns, living near the Pittsburg crossing at Broadway, charged John Payne, in police court today, with assault with intent to rape. The girl is about twelve years old. She accompanied her older sister, Lizzie, to Pain's show last evening, the latter being engaged to appear in the performance. The testimony of the girl and her sister was to the effect that Payne, who is an attache of the combination, told them it was against the rules for anybody not taking part in the show to enter the dressing tents. He offered to find the girl a good seat in the audience and she agreed to go with him. The alleged attempt to assault her occurred soon afterwards. Payne was arrested by Officer Collins. The prisoner emphatically denies the charge. He was bound over to the circuit court in the sum of $500.

Avery Bearnes, the young man who it was thought stole a watch from Koenig, the West Main street saloonkeeper, last Saturday, was not prosecuted on that charge today, owing to lack of evidence. The charge of vagrancy was substituted, to which he pleaded guilty, and was fined $1 and costs. He went to jail.

The police last evening arrested William Bellamy, the barber, for wife desertion and failure to provide. Justice France is hearing the case this afternoon.

TOO MUCH COCAINE.

Miss Augusta Heine Given an Overdose.

Went to the Dentist to Have a Tooth Treated and the Drug Was Administered There.

Miss Augusta Heine, of 98 Madison street, was picked up in an unconscious condition at the corner of East Berry and Clinton streets yesterday afternoon. She was placed in a cab and taken home, where a physician succeeded in restoring her to consciousness, when she explained that she had been having a tooth treated at a dental office and the medicine used by the dentist caused the trouble. Miss Heine was very sick all night and at one time it was feared she could not live until morning. Two physicians attended her constantly during the early part of the night and by daylight succeeded in relieving her so that she was able to sleep comfortably and naturally a few hours. She is now out of danger and will, it is hoped, soon be as well as ever. John C. Heine, the father of the young lady, is very indignant at the treatment she received and threatens to bring suit against the dentist for malpractice. Dr. C. H. English, who had charge of the case, says the drug used by the dentist was cocsine.

A very pleasant entertainment was given by Miss Mattie Chambers at Prairie Grove Saturday evening. The entertainment consisted in select recitations by Miss Chambers, which won great applause; music on the mandolin and guitar by Messrs. Alexander Kell, Cohen and Bailey, which was excellent; pantomine and recitations by Grace Eggleston and songs by Reece and Owen Straight, which were very much appreciated by the audience.

May Yet Reach It.

The safe return of Dr. Nansen from the far north revives interest in the subject of Arctic exploration and it increases belief in the possibility of reaching the coveted goal. Dr. Nansen started out with nothing less than the high purpose of finding the north pole itself. He reached a point four degrees nearer the pole than any other explorer has ever attained, and has returned in health and safety after what he calls a successful expedition. Of course the moral of Dr. Nansen's expedition is: "What man has done man may do, and a great deal more."

Dr. Nansen's experience again verifies the truth that the northern zone of the earth has now been so thoroughly explored and become so well known, that an Arctic expedition cannot become so utterly lost that it is impossible to find it again. The tragedy of Sir John Franklin will never be repeated. The explorers may lose their ships, but cannot themselves be lost. Somewhere in the vast, white solitude the rescuers will find them. Dr. Nansen and his party were picked up by a vessel not in search of them, but following another party, the Jackson-Farnsworth expedition. The road to the north pole has become a commonly traveled highway.

The experience of the Nansen expedition has shown that the problems of the Arctic region can as well be solved by a few as by many. No such expeditions as those of Franklin, Parry, Ross and the other early explorers will ever again be fitted out. If the pole is ever reached it will be by a small party and the glory will be divided among a few persons and but few lives will be risked or lost in future attempts and failures.

Dr. Nansen was gone three years. His ship was provisioned for five. He left his vessel, the Fram, or Forward, in March, 1895, and has lived on land or ice since, showing that a white man can live anywhere that an Eskimo can exist.

The field has not been abandoned, the Jackson-Farnsworth crew is still out, though the Windward, the steamer that brought back Dr. Nansen, has gone to Franz Josef land after the party. The members of that expedition, when they return, will add to the great store of information about Arctic affairs brought back by Dr. Nansen, who based his theories on certain indications given by the Jeanette expedition. Following in the tracks of predecessors, some fortunate explorer may yet reach the pole.

Effect of Free Coinage.

It is often said, "put a dollar's worth of silver in a dollar," as if that were solid wisdom. Such a proposition requires that silver shall have the value of money before it is made money! Would gold have the same value if the coining of it into money were prohibited, and its use limited to the arts? Is it possible for either silver or gold to have the same value if limited to use in the arts, that they have or would have if given full monetary use in addition to their use in the arts? Of course not. Over 70 per cent. of the value of gold comes from its monetary use, and less than 30 per cent. from its use in the arts. Silver must have the same mintage right that gold has before it can have the same value. If the right to make bread of spring wheat were taken away, would spring wheat have the same value winter wheat has, or the value that winter wheat would have if bread could be made from that alone? First monetize silver, give back to it its ancient mintage rights, and then if it does not circulate at par with gold, a good reason might be found for changing the coinage ratio, as in 1834, when the weight of the gold coins was changed.

Gail Hamilton Dead.

Gail Hamilton (Mary Abigail Dodge), one of the foremost writers of the time, whose works have been read and admired by millions, is dead, and the world loses one who did much to make it better and brighter and happier.

Her dangerous illness was noticed in yesterday's telegraph columns of THE SENTINEL. Her death occurred last night at 9 o'clock at her home in Hamilton, Mass. Miss Dodge, since her illness in the spring, had appeared in good spirits and had passed considerable time in the open air. She arose apparently quite well Sunday morning, but while eating breakfast was stricken with paralysis. Her physician was immediately summoned. He found her unconscious and she remained in that condition until death came.

Gail Hamilton was a native of the town in which she died, having been born in 1830. At the age of ten years she went to Dr. Clark's private school in Cambridge. She was graduated from Ipswich academy at the age of twenty. In 1851 she went to Hartford as assistant in the Hartford high school. She refused to take the customary examination, but was given the position without doing so. She was also instructor in physical science in this school for several years, and was subsequently governess in the family of Dr. Gamaliel Bailey, of Washington, D. C., the editor of the National Era, to which paper she became a contributor. In 1865-67, she was one of the editors of Our Young Folks, a magazine for children, published in Boston.

From 1870 until a little over a year ago she had lived most of the time with her cousin, Mrs. James G. Blaine, in Washington. In course of this daily contact with the Blaine family Miss Dodge was led into a very close friendship with Mr. Blaine, and at the death of the latter she became his literary executor, being in possession of all his papers and documents of value to her as his authorized biographer. She was engaged, as frequently as her health would permit, on Mr. Blaine's biography from the time of his death until her illness of last year, and it is thought her untiring devotion to the work was instrumental in bringing about prostration and eventual death.

Gail Hamilton was a frequent contributor to prominent magazines and her published works, written in a witty and aggressive style, consists largely of selections from her contributions. In 1887 she wrote a series of letters on civil service reform for a New York paper. Letters on a wide range of public questions, written for the Boston Journal, were widely copied throughout the United States. Miss Dodge's one novel, 'First Love is Best," had not the success which attended some of her other works. During recent years she engaged in political writings and many famous review articles and political interviews have been accredited to her, which have roused much warm discussion and have exerted more or less influence upon national politics.

Japan caught a tartar when she conquered the island of Formosa, that is to say, when she was supposed to conquer it. The Japan-China war has been over more than a year, yet Japan is tugging away at Formosa still, unable either to hold on or let go. The final outcome is not uncertain, however. Japan will surely subdue the whole of Formosa if the jealous European powers will let her alone. When the conquest is complete, the victorious and belligerent Japs will turn their attention to something else. That is the extension of their power southward among the islands of the sea. Formosa will be the stepping stone to this extension. The island empire of the orient will require still more islands to constitute it the great power it dreams of being. Nothing less than the annexation of some of the south sea islands will satisfy the towering ambition of new Japan. Why not? Is there any reason why Japan, as well as England and Germany, should not take possession of islands in the southern ocean that have not been already appropriated by greedy Europeans? American sympathy is with the Japs anyhow.

Specimen of pure American wit from a southern paper: "Our mule was struck by lightning yesterday. The lightning is doing as well as could be expected under the circumstances."

Public School Lectures.

It is a good sign that these are increasing. In some of the cities the generosity of private individuals of wealth enables the working people to attend lectures in the halls of the public school houses at stated intervals during the winter season. Some of the state legislatures have made provision for the appropriation of small sums from the public school fund to pay the lecturers. This is perhaps the best way. Cities in states in which no such provision is made for free lectures to the people ought to bring the matter before their legislatures without delay.

New York state has such a law. The report of the lecture course in New York city during the past season shows that 1,040 admirable lectures were given to the people, chiefly at the public school buildings. In most instances the speakers received a very trifling fee, but there was no charge for admission to the people. The audiences at these sittings were literally an uprising of the people. Men in their working clothes, those who had only passed long enough to swallow a bit of food after coming home from their 10 hours' toil, hastened to the hall to get good seats. The attendance at all the lectures for the season reached the remarkable figure of 392,733. Next year it will probably be 500,000. The people almost climb over one another in their eagerness to learn.

In the large cities the audience at the public school free lecture is always composed of many foreigners, those who particularly need instruction in American ways—such of our ways as are good, that is. The course in New York city included lectures on American history and American statesmen, on our national government and city government, also on civil service reform. Natural science, art, literature and music received a full share of attention. So also did foods, hygiene, care of the eyes, teeth, etc. One of the most commendable topics of instruction in some of the cities was alcohol and its effects on the human system. Every department of instruction has had justice done it by the many lecturers except perhaps one. That is the department of ethics. It is all very well for common people to understand the use of the microscope, but will that teach them to be honest and kindly, to lead clean, wholesome lives and to live up to the golden rule? That is the teaching the people need today, and it can be given to them without a trace of theology being mixed with it either.

When the bicycle was first invented, it was considered a remarkable achievement for a wheelman to travel 100 miles a day. Now that is nothing at all uncommon for men and not very remarkable for strong women riders. One or two men have accomplished 400 miles in 24 hours and not a few have made 200 miles in that length of time. Much of this increased speed is to be set down of course to improved roads and improved bicycles. No matter whence the increase of speed comes, however, it is just as much of a gain. It has long been known that one man upon a bicycle can outrun a fast trotting horse and keep up the pace much longer. The crowning glory of wheelmen was, however, attained the other day when a sextuplet bicycle outtraveled for a short distance the fastest express train on the New York Central road. Six athletes and expert wheelmen resolved some time ago to make the race. They trained for it especially, and at a given point, near Syracuse, mounted upon a bicycle built for six, they boldly pedaled out abreast of the rushing train. In a half mile spurt they gained four of the lengths of their own machine upon the train. What they could have done in a greater distance could not be ascertained then and there, for they had to slow up for a bridge. But they proved, as far as they went, that man's will and muscle can outdo steam.

An Old Fashioned Walk.

In a past which now seems very far off people used to enjoy walking tours. A journey of from 10 to 30 miles a day, according to the walker's foot and lung power, was thought to be a fine outing.

The bicycle has superseded all that. Now the tours are made awheel. It sounds strange, therefore, to read in Outing an account by Mr. Alden W. Quimby of a tramp which he took through the heart of Pennsylvania one day lately. He calls himself an old fogy, and the name of his paper is "A Fogy On Foot." The advantages of the foot journey, in Mr. Quimby's estimation, are that one can see the beauties of the country he passes through, which can hardly be the case on the wheel, since the rider must be continually looking ahead in the road. If the bicycle rider says, "But you cannot travel anything like as far on foot as on the wheel," our nimble old fogy has answer here also. He shows us how he walked full 60 miles in one day. That would not be bad even for a bicycle touring party.

Our fogy's road lay through the heart of the most fertile region in Pennsylvania, where the farms are bursting with fatness and the Dunkers drive in yellow topped buggies and fasten their clothing with hooks and eyes instead of buttons, deeming the latter sinful. Hence they have come to be known among neighbors not of their faith as "hook and eye Dutchmen."

Mr. Quimby's sketch makes the reader conclude there is pleasure still in an old fashioned country walk—if one's bicycle is broken, that is.

As soon as the mechanical power hauling wagon is fully developed it will be a great boon to the population of the dry plains of America. In the grazing belts of the west there are millions of acres that furnish herbage for grazing, but which must be irrigated to produce crops. Wood, coal and water are about equally scarce. If a wagon for heavy hauling can be devised to run by petroleum, it will be of great assistance to the farmers and graziers in regions where horse feed and fuel and water are very costly.

What people lack in knowledge of any matter they make up in opinions concerning it, and the more ignorant they are the more opinions they have. The less they know, too, the more obstinately they hold to their opinions.

A man who, like Rev. Dr. Freeman of Haverstraw, has joined in matrimony, holy or otherwise, as the event proves, more than 500 couples has a grave responsibility on his hands.

WILL SHE ABDICATE?

GROUNDS FOR THE RUMOR THAT QUEEN VICTORIA WILL RETIRE.

Albert Edward May Soon Have to Handle the Reins of Government—Abdication Not Popular With Monarchs In the Past—Some Instances, However.

There seems at last some foundation for the report that Queen Victoria means to abdicate, in which event the Prince of Wales will become king of Great Britain and Ireland and emperor of India. The ground of the rumor is her majesty's alleged intention to pass all her time hereafter at Balmoral or Osborne and to give her eldest son the use of Buckingham palace and Windsor castle. Common sense would indicate that where the pageant is there should so much of power as survives in royalty be also. Moreover, the English theory of constitutional government requires a prime minister to consult the sovereign continually, especially during the sessions of parliament, and such consultation is extremely inconvenient, if not impracticable, when the sovereign persistently remains in a remote corner of the kingdom.

It is not age alone which may lead the queen to lay aside the crown, for, although she has ruled 59 years, or longer than any other English monarch, she is only in the seventy-eighth year of her age, or considerably younger than Lord Palmerston and Mr. Gladstone were when they were for the last time her first ministers. But infirmities and bereavements have so far disabled her that for many years she has evinced an inclination to evade her social duties, and it is scarcely to be presumed that her political functions have been more punctiliously discharged.

It would be easy for the monarchical element in the British constitution to shrink into a legal fiction, as so many of its prerogatives have shrunk, and the fact that the throne has not undergone effacement in recent years, but, on the contrary, seems firmly buttressed by the national good will, is due unquestionably to the tact, activity and popularity of the Prince of Wales. He has long borne much of the burden of royalty, and it will seem but just that he should wear the crown.

It is a curious and interesting fact that there has never been an example of voluntary abdication on the part of an English sovereign, although six rulers have been deposed, or seven, if we count Lady Jane Grey, who was crowned and reigned nine days. There have been many acts of self renunciation, on the other hand, on the part of monarchs on the continent of Europe. The memorable surrender of all his titles and powers by Emperor Charles V is not the only instance of the kind in the annals of the Spanish monarchy. Philip V abdicated in favor of his son, Don Luis, but on his son's death resumed the crown. There is, however, no precedent in France for the two abdications of Napoleon I, and those of Charles X and Louis Philippe were made under pressure. This can hardly be said of the abdication of the Austrian throne by Emperor Ferdinand I in December, 1848, for his generals had just beaten a Hungarian army and recovered Vienna. He was doubtless influenced less by the example of Emperor Charles V than by that of Emperor Mathias, who on the eve of the Thirty Years' war renounced the crowns of Bohemia and Hungary in favor of a cousin. It is the house of Savoy which has furnished the greatest number of instances of abdication. In 1434 Amadeus VIII made his son lieutenant general and retired to a monastery, and subsequently he definitely renounced his dukedom in order to become pope under the name of Felix V. His grandson, Amadeus IX, was impelled by his bodily sufferings to abdicate in favor of his wife Yolande. In 1730 Victor Amadeus II, then king of Sardinia, abdicated in order to marry the Countess of San Sebastian, at whose instigation he susbequently tried to regain the crown. In 1802 Charles Emmanuel IV, having been forced by the French to retire to the island of Sardinia, renounced his throne in favor of his brother, Victor Emmanuel I, who in turn abdicated in 1820 sooner than embroil himself both with his own people and with Austria. His next successor but one, Charles Albert, also abdicated, after his defeat by the Austrians at Novara, in favor of his son, Victor Emmanuel II.

After all, however, there have been few instances in which abdication was so entirely voluntary as it would be in the case of Queen Victoria. Her subjects are warmly attached to her, and no open remonstrance would be made should she insist upon retaining the outward guise of sovereignty as long as she continues to live. Those Englishmen who are republicans at heart would doubtless be glad to see pass into abeyance those powers of supervision, regulation and interposition still asserted in theory for the crown and upon which the queen's husband, Prince Albert, laid so much stress. For that very reason her majesty may deem it a duty which she owes to her descendants to transfer to her eldest son official functions which she is no longer able or willing to perform before the public mind becomes accustomed to see them divorced from royalty.—New York Sun.

TO EXPLORE THE CANYON.

The Dangerous Undertaking of a Colorado River Steamboat Captain.

Captain J. A. Mellon, who has commanded a steamboat on the Colorado river for 30 years, has prepared to descend the Green river and then go through the Grand canyon of the Colorado in a small dory. The boat was built to order, is pointed at each end and has a wide, flat bottom, which prevents it drawing more than four or five inches of water. Four Indian boatmen will accompany him.

The region which he intends to explore is little known and is thought to be rich in mineral wealth. The distance is about 1,300 miles, and he thinks he could make it in ten days if he did not stop to look for game and minerals.

In 1869 Captain Powell, chief of the United States geographical survey, attempted to make the trip. He spent four months on the journey, lost several men, had his boats wrecked and was finally forced to abandon the venture. Captain Mellon says that Captain Powell did not have the right sort of boats, to which fact his failure was due.—Philadelphia Times.

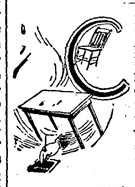
A CHICAGO TRILBY.

MARTHA HARDY IS CONTROLLED BY A SPIRIT.

IN HER TRANCES SHE STARTLES BY A SWEETNESS OF VOICE.

In Her Natural State She Can Not Sing at All—She Has Startled the City by Her Strange Revelations—Locates the Long Lost Chicora.



CHICAGO has a real, live Trilby in the person of Martha Hardy, a sixteen-year-old Ravenswood girl, who is said to do feats when in trance which rival the best of Svengali's hypnotic efforts. She says the source of most of her mysterious talents is the spirit of her sister.

Martha Hardy in the natural state has a childish voice of no power or sweetness, but the neighbors say that when she is "under control" the purity and range of her soprano are marvelous. She is not a politician, but she delivers political orations which, she says, are inspired by the shade of Carter H. Harrison. She is a mere schoolgirl, but she writes poetry when in trance and declares that Eugene Field is the celestial bard who inspires her.

She also says she has located the lost Chicora while under her sister's spirit guidance, and is ready to point out the spot where the wreck lies and the location of the bodies of the crew if any one will provide her with a pass or a ticket to Benton Harbor.

The suburb of Ravenswood and the citizens of Belmont avenue, where Miss Hardy frequently visits, are all wrought up over the strange revelations of the girl and the wonderful change which has come to her own personality within the last few weeks.

About three months ago a younger sister of Martha died. The family often sat and talked of her evenings. On one occasion, while they were gathered about a table at the home of Mrs. G. W. Krelle, where Martha and her mother and married sister were visiting, the elder sister remarked that she believed a good medium could call up her sister's spirit. Martha was sitting thoughtfully by the table with her hands upon it. Suddenly, those who were present say, the heavy table began to sway back and forth. While her friends were watching Martha they saw her eyes become glassy and her form shaken as if she had been seized with a chill.

"Speak to me," said Martha. "If you are the spirit of my dead sister make it known by rapping on the table."

Immediately, her friends say, there came a series of raps. Martha remained in the first trance only a short time and received no further communication on that night. When she came out of the trance she was hysterical. Martha's elder sister is the wife of William S. Frisby, of the firm of Lawson & Frisby, Ravenswood, and it is at her home that some of the most marvelous of the manifestations have occurred.

The manifestation which is said to have revealed the location of the foundered Chicora came only a few nights ago. The girl and her mother were visiting in Ravenswood at the time. Martha's eyes grew suddenly glassy and her form began to shake. She put her hand over her eyes as if shading them from the sun. A minute afterward she began to repeat to them the story of the sinking of the steamer as she said it was appearing to her. The boat was within 800 feet of the pier, she said, but all its lights were out, so that those who were watching from the shore could not see it.

The girl repeated every detail of the sinking, and described the present location of the wreck and the place in the hull where the bodies of the crew were lying. When she came out of the trance she told those about her she was sure she would recognize the spot in a moment. She has never been across Lake Michigan in her life, it is said.

Previous to the possession of the girl by the spirits she seldom had been known to sing, and possessed an inferior child's voice. Now, the neighbors say, the girl has one of the most remarkable soprano voices they have ever heard, and when she is in one of her trances the feats of Trilby would be insignificant in comparison.

One of the feats which the girl performs almost every night is the writing of poems in German, French, and Swedish, although she herself understands only English. In the writing of her poems she asserts she is moved by the spirit of Eugene Field.

A few nights ago she delivered a political speech which she declared was dictated to her by the spirit of Carter Harrison.

MARVELOUS CURE.

A Man Suffered from Lock Jaw 25 Years, but Is Recovering.

McKeesport (Penn.) Times: A cure that borders on the miraculous has been effected in the case of Wallace White, a well-known carpenter of this city, who had suffered from lockjaw for almost a quarter of a century. Mr. White has just arrived home from the hospital and the improvement in his condition is simply wonderful and a complete surprise to his many friends here and elsewhere.

When a boy of 5 years, Mr. White was attacked with a fever. The disease settled in his jaws and locked them tight. For twenty years he has been unable to eat anything except food which had been especially prepared for him and which he forced into his mouth through an opening made by the extraction of several teeth. While he could converse in a way with his friends it was an extremely difficult matter to understand him. After consulting with numerous specialists he left several weeks ago for Chicago, where he has been treated by a noted physician with great success.

Mr. White was kept on the operating table for eight consecutive hours, during which time an incision was made in his cheek and the jaw bones sawn apart. The bones had become joined and had grown together during the progress of the fever. Mr. White then gave a strip of his skin from his breast which was pasted over the parts that had been operated upon. He is now able to use his jaws and his teeth as well as any person who has never had the misfortune to go through such a siege. One more operation will make the cure complete.

A Curiosity of India.

The "tree of a thousand images," which grows in Thibet, has leaves which have their centers marked with images of men, animals, birds, faces, etc. Some authorities claim that some are marked with letters and figures.

Two twelve-year-old lads in Sutton, England, contrived to get some candy out of a slot machine, without dropping in the usual coins. Remorse then attacked them, and they drowned themselves.

An Artist's Bride-to-Be.

Miss Elizabeth Gardner, who is soon to become the wife of the celebrated French artist, Bouguereau, has herself attained considerable celebrity as an artist, both in this country and in France. It is nearly twenty-five years since she sent her first painting to the Paris Salon, and she was the first American woman to gain, as she did in 1887, the Salon medal. Miss Gardner is a native of New Hampshire and a woman of attractive personality. As an art student in Paris she was one of Bouguereau's pupils and an intimate friend of his family. The artist-bridegroom is now about seventy-two years old.

A National Dance.

"Pa," said Imogene Plumbottle, "isn't the polka a national dance?"

"A national dance?" replied old Plumbottle. "Let's see. A step forward—then two steps backward. Yes, I guess it is a national dance, judging from the degeneracy of the American nation."

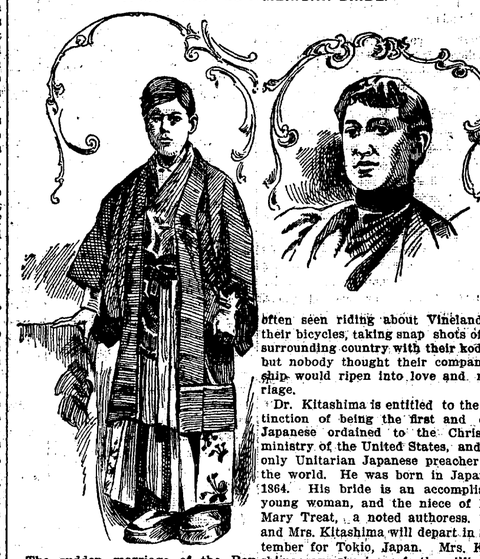
A JAP AND HIS AMERICAN BRIDE.



The sudden marriage of the Rev. Watari Kitashima, Ph. D., the Japanese pastor of the First Unitarian church of Vineland, N. J., and Miss Lillian M. Brown, a few days ago, created a flutter in the parish. The couple were often seen riding about Vineland on their bicycles, taking snap shots of the surrounding country with their kodaks, but nobody thought their companionship would ripen into love and marriage.

Dr. Kitashima is entitled to the distinction of being the first and only Japanese ordained to the Christian ministry of the United States, and the only Unitarian Japanese preacher in the world. He was born in Japan in 1864. His bride is an accomplished young woman, and the niece of Mrs. Mary Treat, a noted authoress. Mr. and Mrs. Kitashima will depart in September for Tokio, Japan. Mrs. Kitashima says she is perfectly willing to forsake forever her country and go to Japan with her young husband, who, it is said, will accept a position under the Japanese government.—New York Journal.

A Beauty Deported.

Mrs. Pauline Reitel, young, pretty and vivacious, left her husband in Geneva, Switzerland, and came to America to meet the man she really loved. The Ellis Island bureau of immigration detained her and she has been returned to Europe. Thus is shattered one of the prettiest romances of the year.

Mrs. Reitel and her husband could not agree, and so they signed an agreement to live free and independent of one another. Mrs. Reitel had a friend in America—M. Didoldo Girand, son of a wealthy French distiller. She had met M. Giraud in Geneva and the young people had fallen in love at once. Now that she had left her husband forever, she reasoned, why should she not fly to M. Giraud? And so she boarded the steamer, came to America, and, almost within calling distance of the young man, was arrested and detained under the immigration laws.

M. Giraud came to the board office to plead for the woman he loves. She entreated the board most pitifully for her liberty, but the officials were obdurate.

Information They Should Furnish at the Proper Time—Knowledge by Which Suffering May Be Avoided.

Every mother possesses information of vital value to her young daughter. When the girl's thoughts become sluggish, with headache, dizziness, and a disposition to sleep, pains in back and lower limbs, eyes dim, desire for solitude, and a dislike to the society of children: when she is a mystery to herself and friends, then, her mother should come to her aid.

See that she has it, and Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., will cheerfully answer any letters where information is desired. Switchman George Olmstead Meets Misfortune.

The McCarthy Brothers Indulge in a Race—The Reading Sued for Damages.

George Olmstead, switchman in the Nickel Plate yards, had the index finger of his left hand pinched so badly that Dr. J. M. Dinnen found it necessary to amputate the digit between the knuckle and second joint. The accident happened at 3 o'clock yesterday, when Mr. Olmstead was coupling two cabooses together. Thomas Hayes will take Mr. Olmstead's place in the yards until the latter is able to resume work.

RACE BETWEEN TRAINS.

An interesting railway event was a race between two freight trains last Friday. One train was on the Nickel Plate and the other on the Pittsburg, and the engineers were Mike and Jack McCarthy, brothers, the former on the Nickel Plate and the latter on the Pittsburg. Both had trains of twenty-four cars each and they left Hobart at the same moment. At Valparaiso, eleven miles east, was a railway crossing and each tried to get there first. They pulled upon the throttles and soon were fairly flying over the rails. Mike lost his cap and all the rod cups off the engine, so great was his speed, and he pulled up at the Grand Trunk crossing in Valparaiso just three car lengths ahead of his brother.

Saturday was the monthly pay day of the Santa Fe railway and the Kansas City distribution of checks was the greatest it has been in more than three years, 840 employes receiving an aggregate of nearly $50,000. There was a jolly assemblage at the home of Clerk L. G. Dailey, of the Pennsylvania shops, last evening, the occasion being a reception in honor of the host's guest, H. J. Hall, of Findley, Ohio. It was a "stag" party and the guests were George Sweringen, E. W. Dartnell, J. J. Quillinan, David Sheiman, all of the Pennsylvania clerical force, and F. O'Brien, of Urbana, Ohio. Cards were indulged in, followed by a delicious luncheon.

The first suit has been brought against the Philadelphia and Reading and the Pennsylvania road for damages for injuries received by the ill fated passengers in the Atlantic City wreck. The suit is brought against both railroad companies. While the loss to equipment in that wreck was not great, it is believed that it will cost the company in fault $500,000 to adjust the claims of relatives of those killed and for the injuries to those who survived the disaster.

William J. Leader has devised a garbage box which possesses considerable merit and on which he hopes to soon secure a patent and engage in its manufacture The box is simple in construction, being a hopper for setting into a hole in the fence, side of a barn or other convenient place, its bottom resting upon two hinges in such a way that the hopper can be tilted and emptied of its contents in a remarkably short time. Its shape is modeled with a view of preventing the garbage from becoming clogged or frozen tightly in the hopper and the interior will be lined with zinc, making it waterproof. One of the good points claimed for this devise is that it places the garbage beyond the reach of dogs.

SISTERS RESUME WORK.

Novitiates of the Year Leave St. Mary's of the Woods.

Six hundred Sisters of Providence left the mother home institution at St. Mary's of the Woods, near Terre Haute, yesterday, to resume their work in the academies conducted by the order throughout the United States. The ten days of secluded prayer, in which they engage each year, ended Saturday with services in the church, at which twelve young women became novitiates, while seventy who became novitiates a year ago second vows. The novitiates of this year were as follows:

FROST IN MANITOBA

Sends the Price of Wheat Up a Notch.

Corn, Oats and Provisions Respond to the Sympathetic Action and Also Go Up.

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—Initial sales for September wheat today were at slightly advanced prices, September opening ¼c higher at 54⅝c. News generally was indifferent, the strength being caused principally by fear of frost in the northwest. These fears were shown to be well grounded by advices from Manitoba, reporting severe frost all over that province and consequent serious damage Influenced by this, September advanced to 55½@55⅝c, steadying at 55c.

Corn was quiet, with some disposition to liquidate shown at first, but prices were helped by the upward trend of wheat. September opened a shade lower at 22⅝c, and advancing to 22¼c.

Oats showed strength from the start, though most of it was borrowed from wheat. Opening figures for September were unchanged at 16⅝c, advancing steadily to 17⅜c.

Provisions had everything in the way of encouraging news, but the bulge of yesterday caused a general realising under which prices dropped.

September pork opened unchanged at $6 30, and declined to $6.25

September lard opened fractionally higher, at $3.50@3 52½, declining to $3 45

September ribs unchanged at $3 37½@3 40.

AROUND THE WORLD

Went John Brough Upon a Bicycle.

Rode the Wheel in All Countries and Had Many Thrilling Experiences.

MANCHESTER, Conn., Aug. 18.—John J. Brough, a well known merchant of this town, aged forty five years, has returned from a trip around the world which consumed exactly a year. Mr. Brough traveled on a bicycle wherever possible. Of the 60 000 miles covered by him 40,000 were by water, 12 000 on his wheel and the rest by railroad in different countries.

Mr. Brough sailed from New York August 17, 1895 He was accompanied on the start by his brother-in-law, Cyrus P. Forsythe, of Black Creek, Ontario, Canada. The two landed at Queenstown, Ireland, and while on a tour of the island Mr Forsythe fell from his bicycle and received a compound fracture of his arm His companion proceeded alone. He visited Scotland north and south Wales and many places in England. From London he went by water to Dieppe, in France, then wheeling to Holland and Germany.

At Frankfort he won a fifty mile bicycle race with a prize of $100 In Italy he rode his wheel from Rome to Naples. At Constantinople he was in prison for three nights and two days for being without a passport. Later he found himself in Arabia and then made his way by Bombay to Calcutta. From the latter city he made his way to the settlements, and then went to Burmah, thence to China; and then went to Japan, and overland to Yokohama. Sailing from the Japanese port, he reached San Francisco.

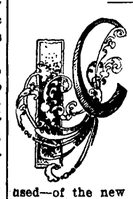
SETTING UP IDOLS.

SMART CHINESE SET HAS A NEW JOSS HOUSE.

Natives of the Flowery Kingdom Belonging to Exclusive Circles No Longer Worship Beside the Almond-Eyed Laundryman.



CHINATOWN has its "409," and the "swells" of that unknown quarter are as conservative as their fellows on Fifth avenue, says the New York Herald. The fact is borne out by the recent dedication—if such a term may be used—of the new joss house in Mott street and the opening of a new social club in the same building. John Chinaman, the merchant, and John Chinaman, the laundryman, will no longer worship at the same joss, for a distinct social line has been drawn. The new joss is a much grander god, both as a divinity and a work of art, than the old one.

The old joss house still stands, and is a tumble-down, three-story brick house, the lower floor vacant, the second a restaurant and gambling room, and the third occupied as a joss house. Beside the front door, pasted on the cracked bricks, are hundreds of little slips of pink and yellow paper, covered with Chinese prayers of the day, and as a fresh supply is pasted on daily without the formality of removing the old ones, you can readily imagine that the accumulated layers of years is very considerable.

The new joss is Kwan Ti, or Kwan Kung, the Master Kwan, as he is called here, the Chinese god of war and the deity most commonly worshiped in China today. This god is believed to have the American Chinaman under his special protection, and legends are current of his appearance at various times to protect his worshipers in the new world.

Against the rear wall, in the front room of the new joss house, is a shrine. This consists of a substantial framework of carved and painted wood, extending from about three feet from the floor almost to the ceiling. A table in front of this constitutes the altar, upon which is spuatted the idol, a most ferocious-looking creature, all heavy with gilding and blue, red, and yellow coloring. Behind him are three panels. Upon the center one, in gilded letters, carved in relief, appear three Chinese legends. Within the frame suspended on the wall hang paper scrolls bearing pictures of the divinities.

On the ledge within the frame is a large box to hold incense and a small gilt shrine, containing an idol, an image of Buddha. At each end of the ledge, standing outside of the frame, are silvered glass vases, holding branches of artificial flowers, while other vases of the same kind are used as candlesticks, and one standing in the center is for incense.

The gilded, carved altar screen is reputed to be the most costly and beautiful piece of hand wood carving ever imported into the country. It represents numerous divinities, and the dragon of China bears a prominent part in the different groupings. From the ceiling hang countless banners of heavy silk in red and blue, and all bearing the dragon in gold embroidery. Green, blue, pink and yellow boards with Chinese writing, evidently prayers, cover the walls; various colored lanterns hang among the banners.

One side of the room contains a furnace, built into the wall, and a long row of pigeon holes, filled with bits of paper, like those pasted on the brick wall beside the street door.

He Didn't Pay.

A young man got on a Broadway cable car the other day and modestly took a seat near the front door. He was dressed well in a light suit of very small check, and wore a silk four-in-hand to match. By one of those remarkable coincidences nobody will attempt to explain a lady of mature age and sour visage got on at the next corner and took a seat next to the young man, and her clothes were off the same piece. Everybody except the woman seemed to think it a funny thing; she looked as mad as a wet hen. When the conductor came along and asked the young man if he paid for two, glancing at the lady, the young man blushed and said he didn't, while everybody else laughed. Whereupon the woman jumped up in wrath that the conductor tried in vain to fathom, and shouted:

"Stop the car! I won't stay here and be insulted!" The young man stood the merriment for a block, and then he quit.—New York Correspondent in Pittsburg Dispatch.

Put Out a Fire with Milk.

Police and firemen have been perplexed for six weeks by the fires that have frequently occurred in letter boxes in the vestibules of apartment houses. There was another such fire early one morning this week in a six-story apartment house wherein twenty-three families live. A milkman was entering the vestibule when a flame shot out of a letter box. It is no reflection on the milk to say it will put out a fire, just as water will. Without a moment's hesitation this milkman raised the can he carried and emptied the milk into the burning letter box. Then he alarmed the janitor and sent in a fire alarm. The firemen found a stream of warm milk trickling from the vestibule, but the fire had been checked. A few bucketsful of water extinguished it. The damage was but $60, but police and firemen are extremely anxious to learn who imperiled all those lives.—New York World.

A Household Treasure.

D. W. Fuller, of Canajoharie, N. Y., says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house and his family has always found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it, if procurable. G. A. Dykeman, druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best cough remedy; that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested. Trial bottles free at Dreier & Bro.'s Drug Store. Regular size, 50c. and $1.00.

SOCIETY GIRL AT THE THROTTLE.

Runs an Engine With a Millionaire's Son For Stoker.

There is no end of good natured gossip in Burlington, N. J., over a recent escapade of Miss Natalie McNeal, the 19-year-old daughter of Andrew McNeal, millionaire and a society favorite. The young woman defeated Edward Burd Grubb, Jr., nephew of the ex-minister to Spain and son of Millionaire Harry B. Grubb, in a two mile bicycle race and exacted two hours' work as a penalty.

A yard engine of the Pennsylvania company is chartered by Mr. McNeal to shunt cars in his foundry yard. Jerry, the engineer, knows Miss McNeal. The young woman ordered Grubb to enter the cab of the engine and then followed.

"Now, you'll have to do the firing," she said to Grubb, "and you must keep on a good head of steam, for we are going to make some quick runs." Then she pulled the throttle wide open, and the locomotive sprang forward. The young millionaire took off his coat and started to heave in coal.

Finally Miss McNeal expressed a desire for more space than the foundry yard afforded and took the locomotive out on the main track. She sounded a few shrill blasts of the whistle, which brought the occupants of the nearby houses to their doors. Then, with the big bell clanging and the whistle tooting, the engine sped down the main line to Burlington.

The tracks run through the main street of the town, and the racket of the bell and whistle attracted widespread attention. There were roars of laughter at the picture young Grubb presented. His white duck trousers were just sufficiently white to show that he was not a regular stoker. The perspiration poured down his face, but he kept manfully at work. It was all great fun for the millionaire's daughter, but Grubb didn't enjoy it a bit.

The locomotive ran half a mile past the town, and those who failed to see it pass down were informed of the affair in time to be at the station to greet it on the return trip. Mr. Grubb was kept at work exactly 1½ hours. Miss McNeal then relented and ran the locomotive back to the foundry yard.

Regretfulness.

"If I were a man," said the restless lad,
"I'd never give up and be still and sad.
Were my name but known in the lists of life
I'd never say die till I'd won the strife.
But who will challenge the steel of youth,
Though his heart be brave and his motto 'truth?'
There's work to be done in this life's short span.
But, alackaday, I am not a man!"

"If I were a boy," says the toiler gray,
"I'd fashion my lot in a better way.
I'd hope and labor both day and night.
And make ambition my beacon light.
Were my bark but launched upon youth's bright stream
I'd bend to the oar nor drift nor dream
Till I reached the haven of peace and joy.
But, alackaday, I am not a boy!"
—Washington Star.

An important message often comes by telegraph, but the most important message that ever was delivered to mankind has been given to them through the newspapers. It is given again in this article.

It is the information that 98 per cent. of all cases of consumption can be completely and permanently cured. There is no doubt about it. The statement is not made recklessly, but after the experience of thousands has made it an indisputable fact. Consumption is not a disease of the lungs. It is a disease of the blood, which in weak lunged people manifests itself by the formation of tubercles in the lungs and the wasting away of lung tissue. The cure for consumption is simple. It consists in the administration of a medicine that will assist the lungs in throwing off tuberculous matter, and that will cleanse the system so that this refuse matter will be replaced by strong, healthy tissues. That sounds like a very simple operation, and yet consumption baffled the combined medical skill of the whole world for hundreds of years. Consumption was considered incurable until the advent of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This great remedy is the most wonderful blood purifier and strengthener that the world has ever known. It is the result of years of study and experiment, by a scientific physician and has been tested in every way by him for over 30 years. It has an unbroken record of success. It cures a great variety of diseases, because almost all diseases have their origin and support in impurity and weakness of the blood. As long as a man's blood is rich and pure, he is in no danger from diseases. The blood is the medium through which food is carried from the digestive system to all of the tissues of the body. If it carries impure things, or an insufficient quantity of good things, trouble will ensue. There is nothing about that so very hard to understand. It is perfectly plain and natural and rational. The "Golden Medical Discovery" puts the digestive system in perfect order, purifies and enriches the blood and so puts the whole body into perfect tune.

COVERED WITH SCALES

Eczema made its appearance on my head in its worst form, and it continued spreading until my face was covered with scales and became a horrid sight. I had a fine head of hair, seven years' growth, and had to sacrifice it. I was in despair. The physicians had failed even to relieve me, when one recommended CUTICURA SOAP. My father procured a set of CUTICURA REMEDIES, and in three weeks the scales left my face and the skin lost its florid hue. In six weeks I was entirely cured. My face was smooth and my complexion clearer and finer than it had ever been before.

It is a conspicuous fact that many large and beautiful shade trees of this city are dead or dying. Why this should be so remains to be explained. Some lay the blame to pavements, contending that solid bodies of brick or asphalt keep the nourishment from the roots; others say the trouble could be traced to the gas mains which leak more or less at some joints. To the property owner who has taken pains to raise his few shade trees only to find his work in vain, this is an interesting question.

Fort Wayne is either playing poor ball or is playing in hard luck. We do not know which, but certain it is that our club is getting the worst of it right along and fails to get up in the standing of clubs. We now hold fifth place. In the two games at Wheeling on Saturday the club of that city beat our home club twice and yesterday they administered two more defeats to our boys. In the ninth inning of the first game with Wheeling yesterday, with the bases full, and the score 7 to 6 and two men out, Rickert came to bat, but could not make the necessary hit to win the game. Fisher played a phenomenal game at second, accepting twelve chances with but one error, the only he has made thus far. In the second game Tebeau's home run drive saved the Fort Wayne's from a shutout. The scores of the two games yesterday were as follows:

First game:

INNINGS.	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	R.
Wheeling	0	0	3	3	0	0	0	0	1	7
Fort Wayne	2	0	0	1	0	1	1	0	1	6

NEW CASTLE, 13; SAGINAW, 10.

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Aug. 18.—Yesterday's game between New Castle and Saginaw was won by the former by a score of 13 to 10.

In the National league the games played resulted as follows:

Philadelphia lost two games to Baltimore by scores of 2 to 3 and 15 to 16. New York won from Washington by 15 to 6 Pittsburg and Cleveland played two games. In the first Cleveland won by 6 to 2; in the second Pittsburg won by 6 to 3. Boston beat Brooklyn by 5 to 4

NOTED PUGILISTS.

John L. Sullivan and Other Ring Celebrities Will be Here.

The coming to Princess rink on Saturday evening, August 22, of John L. Sullivan on his farewell tour is going to bring out one of the biggest crowds of the season. This is positively his last appearance and he is accompanied by the greatest array of fighters and wrestlers that ever went on the road. Sullivan boxes with big Tom Chandler, and Parson Davies is the referee. There is also Don Creedon, champion middleweight of Australia and heavyweight champion of England; Tom Tracy, champion welterweight of Australia and England; Tommy White, champion featherweight of the west; Joe Bertrand, the celebrated California featherweight; Billy Murphy, champion lightweight wrestler, and a half dozen others. Special attention will be given to the performance so they may be attended with perfect propriety by the ladies, giving them a rare opportunity of seeing an excellent exhibition of the sport so much enjoyed by their male relatives. John L's many friends in this city will no doubt make his farewell appearance here a memorial one.

PUBLIC WORK.

Short Session of the Board Yesterday Afternoon.

A petition from Berry street property owners for the repair of sidewalks on that thoroughfare was received by the board of public works yesterday afternoon and the work will be done shortly.

The contract for paving with brick the alley between Wayne and Berry streets, from Clinton to a point 182½ feet east, was awarded to C. E. Moeller & Co., at $2 24 per lineal foot. Metropolitan block will be used in doing the work.

Adolph Foellinger asked for and was granted permission to raise and relay by private contract the sidewalk in front of lots 77 and 78, Original plat.

Ed. Powell's application for a sewer builder's license was deferred until the next meeting, or until the applicant shall successfully pass an examination as to his capability. The present board is very strict in regard to the character and capability of persons wishing license as sewer builders. The improper performance of work is apt to involve the city in suits to recover damages, and the board's stringency is very commendable.

A petition asking for permission to cross through the alley in the rear of lot 36, Fairfield's addition, in order to drain said premises into a private sewer, was granted.

The city civil engineer's plans and specifications for setting up the fountain at the park approach to the West Main street bridge, were examined and approved. The fountain is a large one of handsome design, and will be an ornament to the locality where it is to be placed.

Professor Munyon's Wonderful Success as an Advertiser.

Honesty the Keynote—Quantity vs. Quality of Circulation—About Directories—Publishers Are Honest—Editing Advertising.

Prof. J. M. Munyon, of Munyon's Homeopathic Home Remedy company, netted $267,000 from his business last year, the fourth in its history. He attributes this quick, widespread success to his advertising, backed up by the merit of his medicines.

Professor Munyon is interesting, not only because of the size of his advertising expenditures, but because it is confined entirely to readers, and because he has induced some of the very foremost newspapers of the United States to distribute his remedies from their offices under their sanction.

Being asked what he considered the fundamental reason for his great success as an advertiser, he replied:

"Honesty. We have built our success purely on that basis. Telling the truth and telling it continually. Telling it in the best newspapers and telling it in generous space. Druggists, jobbers as well as retailers, have never handled remedies that sold so rapidly, and they attribute this immense sale largely to advertising."

"Your success then is a distinctly newspaper success?'

"Entirely so."

"Do you propose to diminish or increase your newspaper advertising?'

"I propose to increase it."

"You do not think, then, that there is anything that could take the place of newspaper advertising?'

"No."

"In using newspapers, is it your custom to do a great deal with the best, or to scatter your appropriation among them?"

'I believe in using only the best."

"You use some auxiliary advertising, of course, such as cards for drug stores?'

"Very few."

"Why not?"

"I believe that a great deal of money has been lost that way."

'In picking out newspapers, do you choose those with large circulations first?'

"Most invariably."

'Do you ever consult newspaper directories for circulation?'

"Every day."

"Have you ever refused to advertise in a newspaper or discontinued advertising in a newspaper because it refused to give its average actual circulation?'

"Yes."

"Very frequently."

"Yes."

"How much, in round numbers, would you say newspapers have lost of your advertising by refusing to give actual figures?"

"Five per cent."

"Your daily psper expenditures aver age how much?'

"About $33,000 a month."

"Then you withhold $20,000 of advertising from newspapers because they do not give their actual circulation?"

"Yes."

'Do you have a rule that you will not advertise in papers that do not give their actual average circulation?"

"That is an invariable rule that I have given to my contracting clerk."

"Are you ordinarily willing to accept publishers' statements when made in actual figures?"

'Yes, for I believe the publishers think it best to tell advertisers the truth, as it is the most fatal mistake a pser can make to secure a liberal advertiser and then lose him by any false statement on the part of the paper."

"How many papers do you use?'

"Several hundred."

"That is a small percentage. To what do you attribute it?"

"To the honesty of the publishers themselves. I think that very often advertisers are deceived by publishers on account of their own selfish actions, and I have found that where papers are treated fairly we are met in a kindred spirit."

I have endeavored to make my advertisements truthful, and so simple that a child might understand and the most skeptical be convinced of my sincerity. In other words, I believe a person should have faith, absolute faith, in his business in order to imbue the public with confidence. We have endeavored to win the public confidence by doing a little more than we promise."

"That sounds to me like a definition of the policy of your advertising rather than the writing of it?'

"Yes, it is the policy, but the writing is the outgrowth of it. My greatest difficulty has been in getting writers who would tell the story in such a way that the public would believe it. They could write essays, but they could not make converts. They chill the reader rather than warm him towards us. In other words, we endeavor to come in close touch with the reader and converse with him as though he were here in person."

Kasten & Kohlmeyer, manufacturers of the Regular Spanish 5c cigar, have removed their factory to No. 248 Calhoun street, where they will be pleased to greet all their friends. 18eod3t

"The Nearer the Bone, the Sweeter the Meat."

It's an old and homely adage and finds an application here.

The maker of merchandise has reached the end of his Summer "tether."

His season is about over; yours has just begun.

He's anxious to sell what is left of his made up product at almost any reasonable sacrifice.

We're watching your interests in this matter, and as a result have made purchases that will surprise you by their price cheapness.

Makers of Shirt Waists

Are straining every nerve to get rid of the balance of their season's product. It's a big chance for the consumer to buy these dainty Summer garments at a big drop from early season's prices. At least we thought so when we cornered these lots. It's a case of quick sale, and first come, first served.

YACHTS COLLIDE

During a Race for the Vice Commodore's Cup.

The Crew of the Isolde Are Knocked Overboard and Baron Von Sedwitz, of Prussia, is Killed.

SOUTH SEA, Aug. 18—Ailsa, Britannia, Satanita and Meteor started this morning in a race for the vice commodore's cup and twenty-five pounds. Not long after the start Meteor collided with Baron Von Sedwitz's American yacht Isolde. The later was dismasted, several of her crew were knocked overboard and Baron Von Sedwitz was so seriously injured by falling rigging that he was taken to the hospital at Clyde unconscious.

The accident caused considerable excitement and confusion ashore and afloat as it was at first reported that it was Emperor William's yacht which had been dismasted. All the members of the crew of Isolde who were knocked overboard were saved by the boats from the other yachts.

Baron Von Sedwitz died shortly after having been removed to the hospital. He was a grand privy councillor and a member of both the reichstag and the Prussian diet. He has been in parliament for about twenty-five years; was a leading authority on finance in politics, and was leader of the free conservative party. Although comparatively a young man he was unanimously recommended in 1890 by the state cabinet for the then vacant post of minister of finance, but was not appointed because the emperor had taken a fancy to Dr. Miquel.

Particulars of the disaster show that in passing the committee boat, the big yachts overtook the twenty raters. The Britannia and Meteor were then almost abreast of the Isolde and narrowly escaped a collision. The Britannia suddenly shifted her helm to avoid the Saint, when the Meteor struck the Isolde, sweeping her from stem to stern with her bowsprit. The Isolde's main mast and sails crashed overboard and carried with them nearly all of the crew of the Isolde and crushing Baron Von Sedwitz. The Britannia and Meteor immediately hove to and lowered their boats for the assistance of the men struggling in the water. The Ailsa and several other yachts followed their example. Baron Von Sedwitz, when pulled out of the water, was found to have a bad cut on the head and was bleeding from the ears. He was taken on board a steam yacht, which immediately made for Ryde Ceit died while on board the yacht and not shortly after reaching the hospital, as at first announced. Isolde, in addition to losing her mast, etc, had her bows stove in and was towed back to South Sea. Both races were abandoned. The Isolde is a twenty rater, built by the Herreschoffs, and was originally the property of Prince Leopold, of Germany, for whom she was built, and subsequently sold to Baron Von Sedwitz She was taken to England in April of last year. She is a twin yacht of Howard Gould's Niagara, which she has defeated several times.

ROYALTY WILL WED.

Betrothal of Prince Emanuel to Princess Helene.

Heir Apparent to the Throne of Italy Wins the Hand of the Daughter of the Reigning Prince of Montenegro.

CETTIJE, Montenegro, Aug. 18.—Victorio Emanuel, prince of Naples, eldest son and heir apparent of the king of Italy, is betrothed to Princess Helene of Montenegro, third daughter of the reigning prince of Montenegro.

The princess, who was born January 8, 1873, is beautiful, of fine physique, highly educated, and is not accustomed to luxury or even to much comfort. In fact, she hardly knows what it is to have pin money or an allowance. She has been brought up in the style of a Highland chieftain's daughter of the last century and was at one time reported as engaged to king Milan, of Servia.

The prince of Naples, whose matrimonial prospects have been commented upon in newspapers for years, is a young man who at one time or other has been reported engaged to nearly every unmarried princess in Europe, including Princess Maude of Wales and Princess Alexandria of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha.

He first met Princess Helene at Venice and was greatly struck with her beauty. As the princess was held in reserve as a wife for the present czar in case the Hessian match was not consummated, the czar, naturally, is greatly interested in her future and will in all probability bestow upon Montenegro further marks of his approbation, which may or may not take the form of arms, ammunition, etc, as was the case not long ago.

The prince of Naples, it is well known, has entertained a strong dislike for marriage. It has been pointed out that he is not blessed with a strong constitution, although it is not known that there is anything organically wrong about him. But perhaps his morbid sentiment on the subject can best be expressed in words attributed to him when discussing his health. He said:

"I shall never marry." When pressed for a reason, he replied: "I will not give Italy a hunchback king"

His uncle, Prince Oddone, was a hunchback and otherwise deformed, and this seems to have made a serious impression on the sensitive mind of the young prince, who otherwise is pronounced to be a most amiable and worthy young man.

The objection of the prince of Naples to marriage has been so strong that speculation had it that he would resign his succession to the throne in favor of King Humbert's nephew, the duke of Acosta, who was married last year to Princess Helene, of Orleans, daughter of the late count of Paris, and who has been looked upon in some quarters as the possible future king of Italy.

TWO SUICIDES.

William Miles Was Sick and Despondent.

J. C. Williams Went Visiting in Montana and While There Killed Himself.

SEATTLE, Wash, Aug 18—William Massick Miles, a well known club and society man, committed suicide last night in his rooms at the Rainer club. Miles came of a prominent South Carolina family and his father was for two terms attorney general of the state. Despondency over his ill health is believed to have prompted his suicide.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark, Aug 18.—Early yesterday morning J. C. Williams, a visitor from Montana, stabbed himself in the breast four times with a knife. Failing to end his life in that manner, he jumped head first into a deep hole and broke his neck.

NOT ENTHUSIASTIC

Are the Gold Democrats of Vermont.

A Call for a State Convention Results in the Meeting of a Small Number.

BELLOWS FALLS, Vt., Aug. 18.—The state convention of gold standard democrats, called for today, promised little in the way of enthusiasm or even business at 11:30 o'clock this forenoon, the hour appointed for calling the convention to order. At that hour, besides the delegates who reside here, only a dozen persons were present. No details had been arranged previous to the arrival of the delegates and it was decided to await the possible arrival of more delegates on later trains.

PRACTICALLY ENDED

Is the Strike of the Express Men.

The Manager of the Company Announces That He Has All the Men He Needs.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18—At the offices of the Adams Express company in this city it was said today that the strike inaugurated Monday morning is practically at an end. More than the usual number of wagons, it was said, were out today and business was done with the usual expedition. The strikers, however, profess to believe that they will yet carry their point. They allege that last night only three car loads were carried out from Jersey City, although there were goods sufficient to fill nine cars in the warehouses there.

STRUCK IT RICH.

E. W. Eakin in This City to Receive Payment for a Mine.

Today a transaction by which $15,000 came into possession of E. W. Eakin took place in this city. It was the transfer of a lead and zinc mine near Joplin, M., owned by Mr. Eakin and which was purchased by a western syndicate. The sale was made through Hugh McDonald, of San Francisco, as agent. Mr. McDonald arrived yesterday from Joplin and Mr. Eakin came in this morning from Montpelier, Ind., where he has been located of late. The sale was somewhat of a bonanza to Mr. Eakin, as the property was purchased by him for a song before it was developed into a mine.

While in the city Mr. Eaken was the guest of his friend, Dr. J. J. Ogle.

TEN MEN PERISH.

Sad Fate of the Bark Flora Ford.

Fire Breaks Out and Envelops the Ship, Driving the Men to Sea in Boats.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 18—According to private advices received in this city today ten of the crew of twenty-one men of the British bark Flora P. Ford, which was burned at sea several weeks ago, perished The vessel, although sailing under the British flag, was owned principally in this city. She sailed from New Castle, N. S. W., April 22 for Mantila with about 2,000 tons of coal, and on June 8 in latitude 6° N., longtitude 13° E, she took fire, presumably through spontaneous combustion. The flames soon got beyond control, and the crew was compelled to take to the boats. Captain Oscar Smith, a brother to Captain Smith, of this city, took to one boat with ten men, and the mate with nine other members of the crew got in the second boat. Whether or not the two boats kept company with each other is mere conjecture. Captain Smith, however, with his ten men, succeeded in being saved, but nothing has ever been heard from the chief mate and his crew. The sea at the time was rough and the probabilities are that the boat was capsized and all were lost. There are hopes, however, that the shipwrecked mariners may have been picked up by some passing vessel and will yet be heard from.

MAY GIVE UP THE TURF

Lucky Baldwin Has Bad Luck This Season,

And This Year of Misfortune May Induce Him to Abandon the Race Track.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 18.—It is reported in the east that Lucky Baldwin may retire from the turf. This story has been placed in circulation as a result of the bad luck his string had early in the season. His youngsters, all of whom were by Emperor Norfolk and The Hook, became sick soon after reaching St. Louis and were very slow about rounding into form. Recently, however, they have been a winning some races at Latonia and Detroit.

Baldwin has always had marvelous success in racing, and that a year of misfortune is something to which he is unaccustomed. His breeding operations have always turned out well, however, and his sale of Rey Del Carerres and Rey El Santa Anita to Mr. Croker netted him a tidy sum last year. It is settled that he will not abandon the breeding of race horses. Whether he will discontinue racing or not is something he will decide during the winter. His decision will probably depend a great deal on whether he can secure a competent trainer and jockey.

ROTHACKER DEAD.

Dies From Wounds Received From Lundy.

The Prisoner Claims Self-Defense, Though He is Charged With Murder.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Aug. 18—Fred S. Rothacker, who was stabbed by Attorney Charles Lundy, on Mount Auburn street early yesterday morning, died this morning at the hospital from the effects of the wound. The charge against Lundy will be murder, but it is likely that a case of self-defense will be shown. Lundy is an athlete and it was surprising to his friends that he resorted to a knife when attacked by the Rothackers, one of whom, at least, was intoxicated It now appears that he was at the time suffering from an acute case of piles and was in no condition to meet even a single antagonist with natural weapons.

G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT.

St. Paul Making Big Preparations for It.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 18—But two weeks remain for the preliminary work for the thirtieth encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic and the local arrangements are almost completed so far as the local committees are concerned. Letters thus far received warrant the estimate that not less than 30,000 veterans will be in line on the day of the big parade. The parade will be one of, and for the veterans only, the commander-in-chief having fordered positively that there shall be no carriages in line

Many inquiries have been received as to the time Commander-in-Chief Walker will arrive in St. Paul and the announcement is made officially that he will not arrive until the morning of Tuesday, Sept. 1.

Already nearly 200 reunions of various army organizations have been booked to be held during encampment week.

FREE SILVER CONVERTS.

Two Prominent Logansport Republicans Leave Their Party.

LOGANSPORT, Ind., Aug. 18—Among the recent converts to free silver is Professor Hensley Neff, brother to Dr. J. N. Neff, of this city. Mr. Neff is one of the best known teachers of this county and has heretofore been identified with the republican party.

Another notable convert is W. P. Ward, of Kokomo, treasurer of the Howard county republican committee. He announced his determination Saturday to support Bryan and Sewall and resigned his place on the republican committee.

TEBEAU VICTORIOUS.

Comes Out of the Contest With Flying Colors.

The Court Decides That the $200 Fine Was Unjust and Should Not be Paid.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug 18—Captain Oliver Tebeau, of the local base ball team, came out of his memorable fight against the National league today with flying colors. Judge Noble rendered his decision in the Tebeau injunction case this morning. Only a few fans were on hand and even President Robison, who had followed the entire proceeding from the start, was not in attendance at the closing scene. But when the ruling of the court was imparted to him, he deemed himself the happiest man on earth. Besides declaring the fine illegal the court ruled that he would grant a noninjunction to prevent the league from either interfering with the Cleveland team or its captain, but for the fact that the same objects were assured by continuing the original restraining order in force, and that more wrong might be done than obviated by any other course. The object of the injunction prayed for in the petition was to prevent the national league from collecting an alleged wrongful $200 fine assessed against the local captain or barring the player for participating in championship games

DEBS' VIEWS.

He Thinks Sewall Should Give Way to Watson.

"Unless the Maine Man Withdraws, the Success of the Ticket is Not Assured."

OMAHA, Neb., Aug 18.—Eugene V. Debs has written, under date of August 6, a letter to George P. Garrison, of Chadron, Neb, setting forth his views on silver and fusion between the democrats and populists. Mr. Debs states his attitude clearly. He says, referring to the fusion and the present condition of the national tickets:

"Without the support of the populists the democratic party could not win. The populists, animated by patriotic motives, accorded first honors to the democrats, and the democrats, if they are animated by similar motives, will now accord the populists second place by placing Mr. Watson on the ticket with Mr. Bryan. Mr. Sewall can well afford to step aside to effect this union of the two great forces and insure the election of the people's candidates. Such action on the part of Mr. Sewall would make him a far greater man than the vice president. Failing to accord the people's party such recognition by giving them a place on the national ticket, there will de dissatisfaction which may culminate in open revolt, especially in the southern states, where populists have suffered all sorts of indignities at the hands of the Bourbon democrats, and this may cost Mr. Bryan his election and put McKinley and goldbugism in power. For the mere offices we care nothing, for we scorn spoils in any form. But for the principle involved, we care and have a right to care much. There is a vast difference between Mr. Bryan and the democratic party. If the latter's only ambition is to swallow the people's party so as to place them in power and get possession of the offices, their design will and should be thwarted. I would far rather see McKinley elected than have another democratic administration."

BURT ARRESTED.

Found Loitering Around the Board of Trade.

Carried Evidences of Guilt in the Shape of a Blood Stained Knife.

CHICAGO, Aug. 18—Eugene Burt, who is wanted in Austin, Texas, for the murder of his wife and two children about a month ago, was arrested in the Rialto building today. The dirk with which his crime was committed was found on his person, and blood stains were still visible on his straw hat His arrest was brought about through information furnished the police by M. J. Pointdexter, a former resident of Austin, who recognized Burt yesterday loitering around the open board of trade. Burt admitted he was the man wanted.

Gail Hamilton's Funeral.

HAMILTON, Mass., Aug. 18—The funeral of Abigail Dodge, "Gail Hamilton," will take place from Hamilton Congregational church at 3:30 p. m. on Thursday. Rev. Mr. Nichols, an old friend of the family, will officiate. It is understood that the family are willing that the villagers and personal friends of Miss Dodge shall attend, but do not countenance the idea of a public funeral.

To Suppress Gambling.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 18.—It is announced that the new governor of the federal district will undertake to suppress gambling here. With every new administration of affairs in this city the same reform is mooted, but nothing is ever accomplished.

THE CROPS OF EUROPE.

Generally Favorable Are the Prospects as Announced.

In Great Britain Wheat Will Approximate Thirty-two Bushels Per Acre—Showings From Other Nations.

WASHINGTON, Aug 18—Generally favorable prospects for the crops of Europe are announced in the report of the European agent of the agricultural department. The report follows by countries:

Great Britain—The harvest is half over, and it is believed that wheat will closely approximate thirty-two bushels per acre, the highest average for many years. The total harvest will approximate 56,000,000 bushels the area being only about 1,750,000 acres. The barley crop will be very good and is generally in very good condition. Oats are expected to fall considerably below the average. The hay crop is seriously deficient A continuance of the summer drought through the autumn will result in such scarcity of feeding stuffs as to lessen materially the value and number of cattle and sheep. The first pocket of this season's English hops was sold in London on the 27th of July for $58.30 the hundred weight, (112 pounds)

France—The first report as to crop prospects issued by the minister of agriculture states that winter wheat is looking well or very well in nearly all the departments where autumn sown cereals are grown. Spring wheat is reported as good or very good. The harvest will be completed early, and it is confidently expected that it will somewhat exceed that of last year, 340,000,000 bushels.

Germany—The wheat harvest is beginning. The lowest estimate is 96,000,000, the highest 112,000,000 bushels. The barley crop is reported to be exceptionably good, both in quantity and condition. Rye is a good average. The potato crop, an important one in this country, is reported as average, at least.

Spain and Portugal—The harvest has been most irregular, but the minimum estimate of the wheat product of the Iberian penisula is 50,000,000 bushels, of which Portugal cannot produce more than 40,000,000 bushels.

Italy—The wheat crop is probably something more than average. This means about 75,000,000 bushels. Other crops are a good average.

Austria-Hungary—The return from all but the southern provinces are good and the prospects is for an average crop of wheat and barley. The wheat estimate ranges from 175,000,000 to 225,000,000 bushels.

Roumania—An average crop of wheat is expected and with average August weather corn will yield a big crop.

Russia—The harvest in the southern part will be delayed by moisture and cool weather during the end of July, particularly the barley harvest. Reports from the southwest indicate that wheat will be under average, but elsewhere throughout the whole of the country a good average seems to be expected.

Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Norway and Sweeden report average crops.

From January 1 to August 1, 1895, the coinage of silver dollars by the mints of the United States was $8,562,412 while the coinage of silver dollars from 1792 to 1873 aggregated $8,031,238 only.

The world's product of silver during the calendar year 1895 is estimated to have been $226,000,000. The amount of new bullion used in the coinage so far as known was $100,069,000, and from reports received from twelve countries the amount used in the industrial arts was $12,000,000, while the exports to the east amounted to $37,500,000 making the total disposition of the world's silver product for 1895, so far as known, $179,569,000, which would leave $46,430,000 for coin and use in the arts by the countries from which no reports have been received.

William Swope, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Swope, of East Lewis street, has reason to remember his twelfth birthday for some years. Yesterday he had a party in honor of the anniversary and after supper the host and his guests repaired to the garden in the rear of the house to play, and while thus engaged, Willie fell from a tree and fractured the bones of one of his arms Dr. J. WAS REALISTIC.

The "Last Days of Pompeii" at Centlivres' Park.

An Impressive Exhibition Seen Under the Canopy of the Heavens—A Grand Display of Fireworks.

Realistic impressive, and interesting was the production at Centlivres park last night of Pain's summer night carnival, 'The Last Days of Pompeii,' and, notwithstanding the fact that it was a cool evening and the Robinson-Franklin circus on the jail flats drew thousands to that tented amusement, there was a large audience present to witness the exhibition

The production has been seen before in this city and its representation last night by the large company under the management of Mr O. E. Skiff, was equal to its former which was so universally admired and which drew people here from many neighboring towns.

Before the semi circle of seats was the representation of ancient Pompeii, with dark Vesuvius looming up threateningly in the background. The mountain scene was one of real artistic merit, and riveted the attention of the people while light remained. In the center was a miniature lake, which played a conspicuous part in the pyrotechnical display. The program opened with a representation of Bulwer's romance. Crowds of priests, civilians, etc, marched and played in mimic form the life of ancient Greece. All were then arrayed before the temples, where they watched the hippodrome feats and specialties. There were races—chariot, hurdle, etc, statuesque work, acrobatic feats of strength, etc. The spectacular romance was then resumed until old Vesuvius, as out of patience with the revelry and idolatry upon which he looked, suddenly belched forth his flood of fire. The populace ran hither and thither in mimic affright, the temples tumbled down and the air was split with a succession of explosions. It was a brilliant scene and no less beautiful than wonderful. Then followed a grand display of fireworks. Beginning with rockets, showers and the like, the operators worked to the large set pieces, of which there were about a dozen. The artificial lake was covered with water pieces that gushed out streams of golden fire like so many geysers.

The performance will be repeated tonight. Tonight is ladies' night and a pyrotechnic portrait of the handsomest lady in Fort Wayne will be presented.

AN AWFUL CRIME.

Elmer Ferguson Brutally Murdered.

Charles Sannard Dealt the Death Blow.

Fearful Tragedy Enacted at the Pain Performance.

The Murderer Escapes and is Now at Large—Several Arrests on Suspicion—Details of a Shocking Crime.

Elmer E Ferguson, a laborer, of 260 East Jefferson street was the victim of a most foul murder at the Pompeii exhibition last night, and the assassin who committed the crime escaped and is still at large

The tragedy was enacted in the dressing room tents of Pain's big show at Centlivre park shortly before the opening of the performance.

Ferguson was one of several hundred from this city who responded to the call of the show management for supernumeraries and was assigned to a silent part which required him to don a costume of a Roman soldier. By some misunderstanding he got hold of the wrong costume, and the mistake was discovered by Oscar Kahlert, property man for the show. Kahlert, it is said, was abusive in his language, which Ferguson resented and a quarrel was precipitated, ending in a fight between the two men.

Several attaches of the show rallied to the assistance of Kahlert, among them Charles Sannard, a tent hand Sannard, in a frenzy of rage picked up a heavy stake and, rushing to the spot, dealt Ferguson a cruel blow on the side of the head The victim of the murderous assault dropped like a stone

While the tragedy was being enacted several Fort Wayne parties also acting temporarily in the performance were seized with a panic and scattered before the infuriated murderer, fearing violence to themselves and not daring to interfere. The first to recover to the full realization of the situation were Jasper Waikle, brickmason residing on Custer avenue and J. W. Snyder, a carpenter who lives at 196 Broadway These men were acquainted with Ferguson. Together they made an effort to capture Sannard, who after delivering the fatal blow made his escape from the scene. The efforts of Waikle and Snyder in this direction were fruitless as the murderer had been lost sight of in the crowd.

Attention was now paid to the victim of assault, who lay bleeding and senseless upon the ground, and whose life was fast ebbing away. Manager Skiff, of the show, and Louis Heilbroner summoned Dr. Rosenthal and the officers to the grounds as early as possible, and in the meantime the eight officers who were detailed on duty at the park were furnished a description of the murderer and instructed to use their best efforts to apprehend him When the physician arrived he pronounced the injured man as being beyond the aid of medical skill as he was then dying. Ferguson was carefully lifted into the patrol wagon and while being conveyed to Hope hospital he breathed his last. His father, who was apprised of the terrible deed, awaited his son's coming at the hospital. When told of the boy's death he wept like a child.

Superintendent Gorsline and Sheriff Clausmeier dispatched their men to various parts of the city and on the outskirts.

The show management assisted the officers in every way possible Immediately after the performance a roll call showed that every member of the company was present except Sannard. Notwithstanding this fact several arrests were made on suspicion, and Oscar Kahlert, the property man, with whom Ferguson first had trouble, was taken into custody, Deputy Sheriff Summers making the arrest. Upon information of Wm Parent, of this city, an attache of the show named James McCormick was placed under arrest by Detective Cooling and Deputy Sheriff Ryan. B W Galloway, living at the corner of Lewis and Monroe streets, also identifies McCormick as the murderer, but their opinion differs materially with that of other witnesses who say that Sannard wielded the club that dealt the death blow McCormick was held to have his hearing this afternoon before Mayor Scherer. He is a night watchman, having joined the show five weeks ago at Sioux City, Iowa

Sergeant Dawler arrested one Thos. F. Mason on Lafayette street on suspicion but there was evidence to show that he was the wrong man Mason was a tramp and yesterday secured temporary employment with the show A charge of intoxication was preferred against him and he is now in jail for that offence.

Sheriff Clausmeier and Deputy Summers, while trying to secure one of Pain's cars at the south depot, were confronted by Charles Scholcraft, a colored porter, who interfered with them and became so impudent that he was arrested and fined $25 this morning. Scholcraft claimed to be an employe of the railroad company, but strange to say he was asking the show B management to bail him out of jail today.

Elmer Ferguson, the murdered man, is twenty four years old. He came to this city from Warsaw seven years ago. His father, James Ferguson, is a blacksmith by trade, but owing to his advanced age has followed no occupation for several years The dead son, Elmer, and two others Walter and John, jr., were the support of the family Elmer had been employed on the water works at odd times, but had no regular job. He was not a quarrelsome fellow, but once aroused would prove a formidable opponent, as he was a powerfully built man

The remains were taken charge of by Funeral Director Peltier and today conveyed home

As THE SENTINEL goes to press Kahlert and McCormick are being tried before Mayor Scherer, and Pain's manager has retained Attorney W. H. Shambaugh to defend them. Kahlert is being tried on the charge of assault with intent to kill.

THE MURDERER

He is described as a man about twenty six years old, five feet, seven inches tall and weighing about 170 pounds. Dark complexion, small dark moustache. Had on black coat and pants and brown soft hat. The description has been sent to the chiefs of police and sheriffs within a radius of 200 miles of Fort Wayne.

ANOTHER MAN'S PANTS

Found on Frank Schobay's Legs by an Officer.

Frank is Arrested—Little Lydia Burns Makes a Serious Charge Against John Payne—Police Notes.

Officer Bob Dickson has a keen eye for stolen property. At an early hour this morning Officer Dickson saw a pair of pants moving along the street. Inside the pants was a pair of legs and the legs belonged to one Frank Schobay. Those pants were the property of Frank Rendolph and as the officer had a description of the stolen property, pants legs and man were soon safely behind the bars. Although the evidence was convincing to prove that Schobay stole the goods, he protested innocence of the theft and told a very crooked story. When cross-questioned by Prosecutor Doughman he contradicted himself several times. The mayor bound him over in the sum of $200.

Lydia Burns, daughter of Mrs. A. Burns, living near the Pittsburg crossing at Broadway, charged John Payne, in police court today, with assault with intent to rape. The girl is about twelve years old. She accompanied her older sister, Lizzie, to Pain's show last evening, the latter being engaged to appear in the performance. The testimony of the girl and her sister was to the effect that Payne, who is an attache of the combination, told them it was against the rules for anybody not taking part in the show to enter the dressing tents. He offered to find the girl a good seat in the audience and she agreed to go with him. The alleged attempt to assault her occurred soon afterwards. Payne was arrested by Officer Collins. The prisoner emphatically denies the charge. He was bound over to the circuit court in the sum of $500.

Avery Bearnes the young man who it was thought stole a watch from Koenig, the West Main street saloonkeeper, last Saturday, was not prosecuted on that charge today, owing to lack of evidence The charge of vagrancy was substituted, to which he pleaded guilty, and was fined $1 and costs. He went to jail.

The police last evening arrested William Bellamy, the barber, for wife desertion and failure to provide. Justice France is hearing the case this afternoon.

TOO MUCH COCAINE.

Miss Augusta Heine Given an Overdose.

Went to the Dentist to Have a Tooth Treated and the Drug Was Administered There.

Miss Augusta Heine, of 98 Madison street, was picked up in an unconscious condition at the corner of East Berry and Clinton streets yesterday afternoon. She was placed in a cab and taken home, where a physician succeeded in restoring her to consciousness when she explained that she had been having a tooth treated at a dental office and the medicine used by the dentist caused the trouble Miss Heine was very sick all night and at one time it was feared she could not live until morning. Two physicians attended her constantly during the early part of the night and by daylight succeeded in relieving her so that she was able to sleep comfortably and naturally a few hours. She is now out of danger and will it is hoped, soon be as well as ever John C. Heine, the father of the young lady, is very indignant at the treatment she received and threatens to bring suit against the dentist for malpractice Dr. C. H. English, who had charge of the case, says the drug used by the dentist was cocaine.

A very pleasant entertainment was given by Miss Mattie Chambers at Prairie Grove Saturday evening The entertainment consisted in select recitations by Miss Chambers, which won great applause, music on the mandolin and guitar by Messrs. Alexander Kell, Cohen and Bailey, which was excellent, pantomime and recitations by Grace Eggleston and songs by Reece and Owen Straight, which were very much appreciated by the audience.

May Yet Reach It.

The safe return of Dr. Nansen from the far north revives interest in the subject of Arctic exploration and it increases belief in the possibility of reaching the coveted goal. Dr. Nansen started out with nothing less than the high purpose of finding the north pole itself. He reached a point four degrees nearer the pole than any other explorer has ever attained, and has returned in health and safety after what he calls a successful expedition. Of course the moral of Dr. Nansen's expedition is: "What man has done man may do, and a great deal more."

Dr. Nansen's experience again verifies the truth that the northern zone of the earth has now been so thoroughly explored and become so well known, that an Arctic expedition cannot be come so utterly lost that it is impossible to find it again. The tragedy of Sir John Franklin will never be repeated. The explorers may lose their ships, but cannot themselves be lost. Somewhere in the vast, white solitude the rescuers will find them. Dr. Nansen and his party were picked up by a vessel not in search of them, but following another party, the Jackson-Farnsworth expedition. The road to the north pole has become a commoniy traveled highway.

The experience of the Nansen expedition has shown that the problems of the Arctic region can as well be solved by a few as by many. No such expeditions as those of Franklin, Parry, Ross and the other early explorers will ever again be fitted out. If the pole is ever reached it will be by a small party and the glory will be divided among a few persons and but few lives will be risked or lost in future attempts and failures.

Dr. Nansen was gone three years. His ship was provisioned for five. He left his vessel, the Fram, or Forward, in March, 1895, and has lived on land or ice since, showing that a white man can live anywhere that an Eskimo can exist.

The field has not been abandoned, the Jackson-Farneworth crew is still out, though the Windward, the steamer that brought back Dr. Nansen, has gone to Franz Josef land after the party. The members of that expedition, when they return, will add to the great store of information about Arctic affairs brought back by Dr. Nansen, who based his theories on certain indications given by the Jeanette expedition. Following in the tracks of predecessors, some fortunate explorer may yet reach the pole.

Effect of Free Coinage.

It is often said, "put a dollar's worth of silver in a dollar," as if that were solid wisdom. Such a proposition requires that silver shall have the value of money before it is made money! Would gold have the same value if the coining of it into money were prohibited, and its use limited to the arts? Is it possible for either silver or gold to have the same value if limited to use in the arts, that they have or would have if given full monetary use in addition to their use in the arts? Of course not Over 70 per cent. of the value of gold comes from its monetary use, and less than 30 per cent. from its use in the arts Silver must have the same mintage right that gold has before it can have the same value. If the right to make bread of spring wheat were taken away, would spring wheat have the same value winter wheat has, or the value that winter wheat would have if bread could be made from that alone? First monetize silver, give back to it its ancient mintage rights, and then if it does not circulate at par with gold, a good reason might be found for changing the coinage ratio, as in 1834, when the weight of the gold coins was changed.

Gail Hamilton Dead.

Gail Hamilton (Mary Abigail Dodge), one of the foremost writers of the time, whose works have been read and admired by millions, is dead, and the world loses one who did much to make it better and brighter and happier.

Her dangerous illness was noticed in yesterday's telegraph columns of The Sentinel. Her death occurred last night at 9 o'clock at her home in Hamilton, Mass. Miss Dodge, since her illness in the spring, had appeared in good spirits and had passed considerable time in the open air. She arose apparently quite well Sunday morning, but while eating breakfast was stricken with paralysis. Her physician was immediately summoned He found her unconscious and she remained in that condition until death came.

Gail Hamilton was a native of the town in which she died, having been born in 1830. At the age of ten years she went to Dr. Clark's private school in Cambridge She was graduated from Ipswich academy at the age of twenty. In 1851 she went to Hartford as assistant in the Hartford high school. She refused to take the customary examination, but was given the position without doing so. She was also instructor in physical science in this school for several years, and was subsequently governess in the family of Dr. Gamaliel Bailey, of Washington, D. C., the editor of the National Era, to which paper she became a contributor. In 1865 67, she was one of the editors of Our Young Folks, a magazine for children, published in Boston.

From 1870 until a little over a year ago she had lived most of the time with her cousin, Mrs. James G. Blaine, in Washington. In course of this daily contact with the Blaine family Miss Dodge was led into a very close friendship with Mr. Blaine, and at the death of the latter she became his literary executor, being in possession of all his papers and documents of value to her as his authorized biographer. She was engaged, as frequently as her health would permit, on Mr. Blaine's biography from the time of his death until her illness of last year, and it is thought her untiring devotion to the work was instrumental in bringing about prostration and eventual death

Gail Hamilton was a frequent contributor to prominent magazines and her published works, written in a witty and aggressive style, consists largely of selections from her contributions. In 1887 she wrote a series of letters on civil service reform for a New York paper. Letters on a wide range of public questions, written for the Boston Journal, were widely copied throughout the United States. Miss Dodge's one novel, 'First Love is Best," had not the success which attended some of her other works. During recent years she engaged in political writings and many famous review articles and political interviews have been accredited to her which have roused much warm discussion and have exerted more or less influence upon national politics.

Japan caught a tartar when she conquered the island of Formosa, that is to say, when she was supposed to conquer it. The Japan-China war has been over more than a year, yet Japan is tugging away at Formosa still, unable either to hold on or let go. The final outcome is not uncertain, however. Japan will surely subdue the whole of Formosa if the jealous European powers will let her alone. When the conquest is complete, the victorious and belligerent Japs will turn their attention to something else. That is the extension of their power southward among the islands of the sea. Formosa will be the stepping stone to this extension. The island empire of the orient will require still more islands to constitute it the great power it dreams of being. Nothing less than the annexation of some of the south sea islands will satisfy the towering ambition of new Japan. Why not? Is there any reason why Japan, as well as England and Germany, should not take possession of islands in the southern ocean that have not been already appropriated by greedy Europeans? American sympathy is with the Japs anyhow

Specimen of pure American wit from a southern paper: "Our mule was struck by lightning yesterday. The lightning is doing as well as could be expected under the circumstances."

Public School Lectures.

It is a good sign that these are increasing. In some of the cities the generosity of private individuals of wealth enables the working people to attend lectures in the halls of the public school houses at stated intervals during the winter season. Some of the state legislatures have made provision for the appropriation of small sums from the public school fund to pay the lecturers. This is perhaps the best way. Cities in states in which no such provision is made for free lectures to the people ought to bring the matter before their legislatures without delay.

New York state has such a law. The report of the lecture course in New York city during the past season shows that 1,040 admirable lectures were given to the people, chiefly at the public school buildings. In most instances the speakers received a very trifling fee, but there was no charge for admission to the people. The audiences at these sittings were literally an uprising of the people. Men in their working clothes, those who had only paused long enough to swallow a bit of food after coming home from their 10 hours' toil, hastened to the hall to get good seats. The attendance at all the lectures for the season reached the remarkable figure of 392,733. Next year it will probably be 500,000. The people almost climb over one another in their eagerness to learn.

In the large cities the audience at the public school free lecture is always composed of many foreigners, those who particularly need instruction in American ways—such of our ways as are good, that is. The course in New York city included lectures on American history and American statesmen, on our national government and city government, also on civil service reform. Natural science, art, literature and music received a full share of attention. So also did foods, hygiene, care of the eyes, teeth, etc. One of the most commendable topics of instruction in some of the cities was alcohol and its effects on the human system. Every department of instruction has had justice done it by the many lecturers except perhaps one That is the department of ethics. It is all very well for common people to understand the use of the microscope, but will that teach them to be honest and kindly, to lead clean, wholesome lives and to live up to the golden rule? That is the teaching the people need today, and it can be given to them without a trace of theology being mixed with it either.

When the bicycle was first invented, it was considered a remarkable achievement for a wheelman to travel 100 miles a day. Now that is nothing at all uncommon for men and not very remarkable for strong women riders. One or two men have accomplished 400 miles in 24 hours and not a few have made 200 miles in that length of time. Much of this increased speed is to be set down of course to improved roads and improved bicycles. No matter whence the increase of speed comes, however, it is just as much of a gain. It has long been known that one man upon a bicycle can outrun a fast trotting horse and keep up the pace much longer. The crowning glory of wheelmen was, however, attained the other day when a sextuplet bicycle outtraveled for a short distance the fastest express train on the New York Central road. Six athletes and expert wheelmen resolved some time ago to make the race. They trained for it especially, and at a given point, near Syracuse, mounted upon a bicycle built for six, they boldly pedaled out abreast of the rushing train. In a half mile spurt they gained four of the lengths of their own machine upon the train. What they could have done in a greater distance could not be ascertained then and there, for they had to slow up for a bridge. But they proved, as far as they went, that man's will and muscle can outdo steam.

An Old Fashioned Walk.

In a past which now seems very far off people used to enjoy walking tours. A journey of from 10 to 30 miles a day, according to the walker's foot and lung power, was thought to be a fine outing.

The bicycle has superseded all that. Now the tours are made awheel. It sounds strange, therefore, to read in Outing an account by Mr. Alden W. Quimby of a tramp which he took through the heart of Pennsylvania one day lately. He calls himself an old fogy, and the name of his paper is "A Fogy On Foot." The advantages of the foot journey, in Mr. Quimby's estimation, are that one can see the beauties of the country he passes through, which can hardly be the case on the wheel, since the rider must be continually looking ahead in the road. If the bicycle rider says, "But you cannot travel anything like as far on foot as on the wheel," our nimble old fogy has answer here also. He shows us how he walked full 60 miles in one day. That would not be bad even for a bicycle touring party.

Our fogy's road lay through the heart of the most fertile region in Pennsylvania, where the farms are bursting with fatness and the Dunkers drive in yellow topped buggies and fasten their clothing with hooks and eyes instead of buttons, deeming the latter sinful. Hence they have come to be known among neighbors not of their faith as "hook and eye Dutchmen."

Mr. Quimby's sketch makes the reader conclude there is pleasure still in an old fashioned country walk—if one's bicycle is broken, that is.

As soon as the mechanical power hauling wagon is fully developed it will be a great boon to the population of the dry plains of America. In the grazing belts of the west there are millions of acres that furnish herbage for grazing, but which must be irrigated to produce crops. Wood, coal and water are about equally scarce. If a wagon for heavy hauling can be devised to run by petroleum, it will be of great assistance to the farmers and graziers in regions where horse feed and fuel and water are very costly.

What people lack in knowledge of any matter they make up in opinions concerning it, and the more ignorant they are the more opinions they have. The less they know, too, the more obstinately they hold to their opinions.

A man who, like Rev. Dr. Freeman of Haverstraw, has joined in matrimony, holy or otherwise, as the event proves, more than 500 couples has a grave responsibility on his hands.

WILL SHE ABDICATE?

GROUNDS FOR THE RUMOR THAT QUEEN VICTORIA WILL RETIRE.

Albert Edward May Soon Have to Handle the Reins of Government—Abdication Not Popular With Monarchs In the Past—Some Instances, However.

There seems at last some foundation for the report that Queen Victoria means to abdicate, in which event the Prince of Wales will become king of Great Britain and Ireland and emperor of India. The ground of the rumor is her majesty's alleged intention to pass all her time hereafter at Balmoral or Osborne and to give her eldest son the use of Buckingham palace and Windsor castle. Common sense would indicate that where the pageant is there should so much of power as survives in royalty be also. Moreover, the English theory of constitutional government requires a prime minister to consult the sovereign continually, especially during the sessions of parliament, and such consultation is extremely inconvenient, if not impracticable, when the sovereign persistently remains in a remote corner of the kingdom.

It is not age alone which may lead the queen to lay aside the crown, for, although she has ruled 59 years, or longer than any other English monarch, she is only in the seventy-eighth year of her age, or considerably younger than Lord Palmerston and Mr. Gladstone were when they were for the last time her first ministers. But infirmities and bereavements have so far disabled her that for many years she has evinced an inclination to evade her social duties, and it is scarcely to be presumed that her political functions have been more punctiliously discharged.

It would be easy for the monarchical element in the British constitution to shrink into a legal fiction, as so many of its prerogatives have shrunk, and the fact that the throne has not undergone effacement in recent years, but, on the contrary, seems firmly buttressed by the national good will, is due unquestionably to the tact, activity and popularity of the Prince of Wales. He has long borne much of the burden of royalty, and it will seem but just that he should wear the crown.

It is a curious and interesting fact that there has never been an example of voluntary abdication on the part of an English sovereign, although six rulers have been deposed, or seven, if we count Lady Jane Grey, who was crowned and reigned nine days. There have been many acts of self renunciation, on the other hand, on the part of monarchs on the continent of Europe. The memorable surrender of all his titles and powers by Emperor Charles V is not the only instance of the kind in the annals of the Spanish monarchy. Philip V abdicated in favor of his son, Don Luis, but on his son's death resumed the crown. There is, however, no precedent in France for the two abdications of Napoleon I, and those of Charles X and Louis Philippe were made under pressure. This can hardly be said of the abdication of the Austrian throne by Emperor Ferdinand I in December, 1848, for his generals had just beaten a Hungarian army and recovered Vienna. He was doubtless influenced less by the example of Emperor Charles V than by that of Emperor Mathias, who on the eve of the Thirty Years' war renounced the crowns of Bohemia and Hungary in favor of a cousin. It is the house of Savoy which has furnished the greatest number of instances of abdication. In 1434 Amadeus VIII made his son lieutenant general and retired to a monastery, and subsequently he definitely renounced his dukedom in order to become pope under the name of Felix V. His grandson, Amadeus IX, was impelled by his bodily sufferings to abdicate in favor of his wife Yolande. In 1730 Victor Amadeus II, then king of Sardinia, abdicated in order to marry the Countess of San Sebastian, at whose instigation he subsequently tried to regain the crown. In 1802 Charles Emmanuel IV, having been forced by the French to retire to the island of Sardinia, renounced his throne in favor of his brother, Victor Emmanuel I, who in turn abdicated in 1820 sooner than embroil himself both with his own people and with Austria. His next successor but one, Charles Albert, also abdicated, after his defeat by the Austrians at Novara, in favor of his son, Victor Emmanuel II.

After all, however, there have been few instances in which abdication was so entirely voluntary as it would be in the case of Queen Victoria. Her subjects are warmly attached to her, and no open remonstrance would be made should she insist upon retaining the outward guise of sovereignty as long as she continues to live. Those Englishmen who are republicans at heart would doubtless be glad to see pass into abeyance those powers of supervision, regulation and interposition still asserted in theory for the crown and upon which the queen's husband, Prince Albert, laid so much stress. For that very reason her majesty may deem it a duty which she owes to her descendants to transfer to her eldest son official functions which she is no longer able or willing to perform before the public mind becomes accustomed to see them divorced from royalty.—New York Sun.

TO EXPLORE THE CANYON.

The Dangerous Undertaking of a Colorado River Steamboat Captain.

Captain J. A. Mellon, who has commanded a steamboat on the Colorado river for 30 years, has prepared to descend the Green river and then go through the Grand canyon of the Colorado in a small dory. The boat was built to order, is pointed at each end and has a wide, flat bottom, which prevents it drawing more than four or five inches of water. Four Indian boatmen will accompany him.

The region which he intends to explore is little known and is thought to be rich in mineral wealth. The distance is about 1,900 miles, and he thinks he could make it in ten days if he did not stop to look for game and minerals.

In 1869 Captain Powell, chief of the United States geographical survey, attempted to make the trip. He spent four months on the journey, lost several men, had his boats wrecked and was finally forced to abandon the venture. Captain Mellon says that Captain Powell did not have the right sort of boats, to which fact his failure was due.—Philadelphia Times.

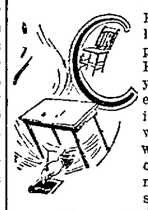
A CHICAGO TRILBY.

MARTHA HARDY IS CONTROLLED BY A SPIRIT.

IN HER TRANCES SHE STARTLES BY A SWEETNESS OF VOICE.

In Her Natural State She Can Not Sing at All—She Has Startled the City by Her Strange Revelations—Locates the Long Lost Chicora.



CHICAGO has a real, live Trilby in the person of Martha Hardy, a sixteen-year-old Ravenswood girl, who is said to do feats when in trance which rival the best of Svengali's hypnotic efforts. She says the source of most of her mysterious talents is the spirit of her sister.

Martha Hardy in the natural state has a childish voice of no power or sweetness, but the neighbors say that when she is "under control" the purity and range of her soprano are marvelous. She is not a politician, but she delivers political orations which, she says, are inspired by the shade of Carter H. Harrison. She is a mere schoolgirl, but she writes poetry when in trance and declares that Eugene Field is the celestial bard who inspires her.

She also says she has located the lost Chicora while under her sister's spirit guidance, and is ready to point out the spot where the wreck lies and the location of the bodies of the crew if any one will provide her with a pass or a ticket to Benton Harbor.

The suburb of Ravenswood and the citizens of Belmont avenue, where Miss Hardy frequently visits, are all wrought up over the strange revelations of the girl and the wonderful change which has come to her own personality within the last few weeks.

About three months ago a younger sister of Martha died. The family often sat and talked of her evenings. On one occasion, while they were gathered about a table at the home of Mrs. G. W. Krelle, where Martha and her mother and married sister were visiting, the elder sister remarked that she believed a good medium could call up her sister's spirit. Martha was sitting thoughtfully by the table, with her hands upon it. Suddenly, those who were present say, the heavy table began to sway back and forth. While her friends were watching Martha they saw her eyes become glassy and her form shaken as if she had been seized with a chill.

"Speak to me," said Martha. "If you are the spirit of my dead sister make it known by rapping on the table."

Immediately, her friends say, there came a series of raps. Martha remained in the first trance only a short time and received no further communication on that night. When she came out of the trance she was hysterical. Martha's elder sister is the wife of William S. Frisby, of the firm of Lawson & Frisby, Ravenswood, and it is at her home that some of the most marvelous of the manifestations have occurred.

The manifestation which is said to have revealed the location of the long lost Chicora came only a few nights ago. The girl and her mother were visiting in Ravenswood at the time. Martha's eyes grew suddenly glassy and her form began to shake. She put her hand over her eyes as if shading them from the sun. A minute afterward she began to repeat to them the story of the sinking of the steamer as she said it was appearing to her. The boat was within 800 feet of the pier, she said, but all its lights were out, so that those who were watching from the shore could not see it.

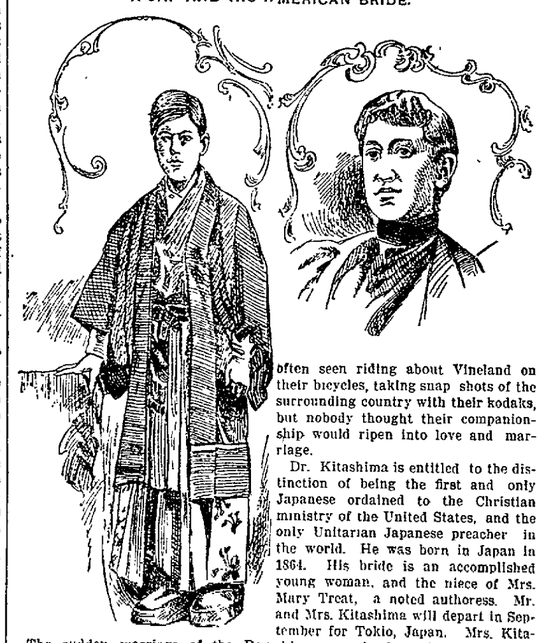
The girl repeated every detail of the sinking, and described the present location of the wreck and the place in the hull where the bodies of the crew were lying. When she came out of the trance she told those about her she was sure she would recognize the spot in a moment. She has never been across Lake Michigan in her life, it is said.

Previous to the possession of the girl by the spirits she seldom had been known to sing, and possessed an inferior child's voice. Now, the neighbors say, the girl has one of the most remarkable soprano voices they have ever heard, and when she is in one of her trances the feats of Trilby would be insignificant in comparison.

One of the feats which the girl performs almost every night is the writing of poems in German, French, and Swedish, although she herself understands only English. In the writing of her poems she asserts she is moved by the spirit of Eugene Field.

A few nights ago she delivered a political speech which she declared was dictated to her by the spirit of Carter Harrison.

A JAP AND HIS AMERICAN BRIDE.



The sudden marriage of the Rev. Watari Kitashima, Ph. D., the Japanese pastor of the First Unitarian church of Vineland, N. J., and Miss Lillian M. Brown, a few days ago, created a flutter in the parish. The couple were often seen riding about Vineland on their bicycles, taking snap shots of the surrounding country with their kodaks, but nobody thought their companionship would ripen into love and marriage.

Dr. Kitashima is entitled to the distinction of being the first and only Japanese ordained to the Christian ministry of the United States, and the only Unitarian Japanese preacher in the world. He was born in Japan in 1864. His bride is an accomplished young woman, and the niece of Mrs. Mary Treat, a noted authoress. Mr. and Mrs. Kitashima will depart in September for Tokio, Japan. Mrs. Kitashima says she is perfectly willing to forsake forever her country and go to Japan with her young husband, who, it is said, will accept a position under the Japanese government.—New York Journal.

MARVELOUS CURE.

A Man Suffered from Lock Jaw 25 Years, but Is Recovering.

McKeesport (Penn.) Times: A cure that borders on the miraculous has been effected in the case of Wallace White, a well-known carpenter of this city, who had suffered from lockjaw for almost a quarter of a century. Mr. White has just arrived home from the hospital and the improvement in his condition is simply wonderful and a complete surprise to his many friends here and elsewhere.

When a boy of 5 years, Mr. White was attacked with a fever. The disease settled in his jaws and locked them tight. For twenty years he has been unable to eat anything except food which had been especially prepared for him and which he forced into his mouth through an opening made by the extraction of several teeth. While he could converse in a way with his friends it was an extremely difficult matter to understand him. After consulting with numerous specialists he left several weeks ago for Chicago, where he has been treated by a noted physician with great success.

Mr. White was kept on the operating table for eight consecutive hours, during which time an incision was made in his cheek and the jaw bones sawn apart. The bones had become joined and had grown together during the progress of the fever. Mr. White then gave a strip of his skin from his breast which was pasted over the parts that had been operated upon. He is now able to use his jaws and his teeth as well as any person who has never had the misfortune to go through such a siege One more operation will make the cure complete.

A Curiosity of India.

The "tree of a thousand images," which grows in Thibet, has leaves which have their centers marked with images of men, animals, birds, faces, etc. Some authorities claim that some are marked with letters and figures.

Two twelve-year-old lads in Sutton, England, contrived to get some candy out of a slot machine, without dropping in the usual coins Remorse then attacked them, and they drowned themselves.

An Artist's Bride-to-Be.

Miss Elizabeth Gardner, who is soon to become the wife of the celebrated French artist, Bouguereau, has herself attained considerable celebrity as an artist, both in this country and in France. It is nearly twenty-five years since she sent her first painting to the Paris Salon, and she was the first American woman to gain, as she did in 1887, the Salon medal. Miss Gardner is a native of New Hampshire and a woman of attractive personality. As an art student in Paris she was one of Bouguereau's pupils and an intimate friend of his family. The artist-bridegroom is now about seventy-two years old.

A National Dance.

"Pa," said Imogene Plumbottle, "isn't the polka a national dance?"

"A national dance?" replied old Plumbottle. "Let's see. A step forward—then two steps backward. Yes, I guess it is a national dance, judging from the degeneracy of the American nation."

A Beauty Deported.

Mrs. Pauline Reitel, young, pretty and vivacious, left her husband in Geneva, Switzerland, and came to America to meet the man she really loved. The Ellis Island bureau of immigration detained her and she has been returned to Europe. Thus is shattered one of the prettiest romances of the year.

Mrs. Reitel and her husband could not agree, and so they signed an agreement to live free and independent of one another. Mrs. Reitel had a friend in America—M. Didoldo Girand, son of a wealthy French distiller. She had met M. Giraud in Geneva and the young people had fallen in love at once. Now that she had left her husband forever, she reasoned, why should she not fly to M. Giraud? And so she boarded the steamer, came to America, and, almost within calling distance of the young man, was arrested and detained under the immigration laws.

M. Giraud came to the board office to plead for the woman he loves. She entreated the board most pitifully for her liberty, but the officials were obdurate.

MOTHERS MUST GUIDE.

Information They Should Furnish at the Proper Time—Knowledge by Which Suffering May Be Avoided.

Every mother possesses information of vital value to her young daughter. When the girl's thoughts become sluggish, with headache, dizziness, and a disposition to sleep, pains in back and lower limbs, eyes dim, desire for solitude, and a dislike to the society of children: when she is a mystery to herself and friends, then, her mother should come to her aid.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will, at this time, prepare the system for the coming change. See that she has it, and Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., will cheerfully answer any letters where information is desired. Thousands of women owe their health to her and the Vegetable Compound, and mothers are constantly applying to her for advice regarding their daughters.

Switchman George Olmstead Meets Misfortune.

The McCarthy Brothers Indulge in a Race—The Reading Sued for Damages.

George Olmstead, switchman in the Nickel Plate yards, had the index finger of his left hand pinched so badly that Dr. J. M. Dinnen found it necessary to amputate the digit between the knuckle and second joint. The accident happened at 3 o'clock yesterday, when Mr. Olmstead was coupling two cabooses together. Thomas Hayes will take Mr. Olmstead's place in the yards until the latter is able to resume work.

RACE BETWEEN TRAINS

An interesting railway event was a race between two freight trains last Friday. One train was on the Nickel Plate and the other on the Pittsburg, and the engineers were Mike and Jack McCarthy, brothers, the former on the Nickel Plate and the latter on the Pittsburg. Both had trains of twenty-four cars each and they left Hobart at the same moment. At Valparaiso, eleven miles east, was a railway crossing and each tried to get there first. They pulled upon the throttles and soon were fairly flying over the rails. Mike lost his cap and all the rod cups off the engine, so great was his speed, and he pulled up at the Grand Trunk crossing in Valparaiso just three car lengths ahead of his brother.

Saturday was the monthly pay day of the Santa Fe railway and the Kansas City distribution of checks was the greatest it has been in more than three years, 840 employes receiving an aggregate of nearly $50,000. There was a jolly assemblage at the home of Clerk L. G. Dailey, of the Pennsylvania shops, last evening, the occasion being a reception in honor of the host's guest, H. J. Hall, of Findlay, Ohio. It was a "stag" party and the guests were George Sweringen, E. W. Dartnell, J. J. Quillinan, David Sheiman, all of the Pennsylvania clerical force, and F. O'Brien, of Urbana, Ohio Cards were indulged in, followed by a delicious luncheon.

The first suit has been brought against the Philadelphia and Reading and the Pennsylvania road for damages for injuries received by the ill fated passengers in the Atlantic City wreck. The suit is brought against both railroad companies. While the loss to equipment in that wreck was not great, it is believed that it will cost the company in fault $500,000 to adjust the claims of relatives of those killed and for the injuries to those who survived the disaster.

William J Leader has devised a garbage box which possesses considerable merit and on which he hopes to soon secure a patent and engage in its manufacture The box is simple in construction, being a hopper for setting into a hole in the fence, side of a barn or other convenient place, its bottom resting upon two hinges in such a way that the hopper can be tilted and emptied of its contents in a remarkably short time. Its shape is modeled with a view of preventing the garbage from becoming clogged or frozen tightly in the hopper and the interior will be lined with zinc, making it waterproof. One of the good points claimed for this devise is that it places the garbage beyond the reach of dogs.

MANCHESTER, Conn., Aug. 18.—John J. Brough, a well known merchant of this town, aged forty five years, has returned from a trip around the world which consumed exactly a year. Mr. Brough traveled on a bicycle wherever possible. Of the 60 000 miles covered by him 40,000 were by water, 12 000 on his wheel and the rest by railroad in different countries.

Mr. Brough sailed from New York August 17, 1895 He was accompanied on the start by his brother-in-law, Cyrus P. Forsythe, of Black Creek, Ontario, Canada. The two landed at Queenstown, Ir land, and while on a tour of the island Mr Forsythe fell from his bicycle and received a compound fracture of his arm His companion proceeded alone. He visited Scotland north and south Wales and many places in England. From London be went by water to Dieppe, in France, then wheeling to Holland and Germany.

At Frankfort he won a fifty mile bicycle race with a prize of $100 In Italy he rode his wheel from Rome to Naples At Constantinople he was in prison for three nights and two days for being without a passport. Later he found himself in Arabia and then made his way by Bombay to Calcutta. FROST IN MANITOBA

Sends the Price of Wheat Up a Notch.

Corn, Oats and Provisions Respond to the Sympathetic Action and Also Go Up.

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—Initial sales for September wheat today were at slightly advanced prices, September opening ¼c higher at 54½. News generally was indifferent, the strength being caused principally by fear of frost in the northwest. Corn was quiet, with some disposition to liquidate shown at first, but prices were helped by the upward trend of wheat September opened a shade lower at 22½, and advancing to 22⅝c.

Oats showed strength from the start, though most of it was borrowed from wheat Opening figures for September were unchanged at 16⅛, advancing steadily to 17¼.

Provisions had everything in the way of encouraging news, but the bulge of yesterday caused a general realizing under which prices dropped.

He Didn't Pay.

A young man got on a Broadway cable car the other day and modestly took a seat near the front door. He was dressed well in a light suit of very small check and wore a silk four-in-hand to match. By one of those remarkable coincidences nobody will attempt to explain a lady of mature age and sour visage got on at the next corner and took a seat next to the young man, and her clothes were off the same piece. Everybody except the woman seemed to think it a funny thing; she looked as mad as a wet hen. When the conductor came along and asked the young man if he paid for two, glancing at the lady, the young man blushed and said he didn't, while everybody else laughed. Whereupon the woman jumped up in wrath that the conductor tried in vain to fathom, and shouted:

"Stop the car! I won't stay here and be insulted!" The young man stood the merriment for a block, and then he quit.—New York Correspondent in Pittsburg Dispatch.

Put Out a Fire with Milk.

Police and firemen have been perplexed for six weeks by the fires that have frequently occurred in letter boxes in the vestibules of apartment houses. There was another such fire early one morning this week in a six-story apartment house wherein twenty-three families live. A milkman was entering the vestibule when a flame shot out of a letter box. It is no reflection on the milk to say it will put out a fire, just as water will. Without a moment's hesitation this milkman raised the can he carried and emptied the milk into the burning letter box. Then he alarmed the janitor and sent in a fire alarm. The firemen found a stream of warm milk trickling from the vestibule, but the fire had been checked. A few bucketsful of water extinguished it. The damage was but $60, but police and firemen are extremely anxious to learn who imperiled all those lives.—New York World.

A Household Treasure.

D. W. Fuller, of Canajoharie, N. Y., says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house and his family has always found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it, if procurable. G. A. Dykeman, druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best cough remedy; that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested. Trial bottles free at Dreier & Bro.'s Drug Store. Regular size, 50c and $1.00

SETTING UP IDOLS.

SMART CHINESE SET HAS A NEW JOSS HOUSE.

Natives of the Flowery Kingdom Belonging to Exclusive Circles No Longer Worship Beside the Almond-Eyed Laundryman.

CHINATOWN has its "400," and the "swells" of that unknown quarter are as conservative as their fellows on Fifth avenue, says the New York Herald. The fact is borne out by the recent dedication—if such a term may be used—of the new joss house in Mott street and the opening of a new social club in the same building. John Chinaman, the merchant, and John Chinaman, the laundryman, will no longer worship at the same joss, for a distinct social line has been drawn. The new joss is a much grander god, both as a divinity and a work of art, than the old one.

The old joss house still stands, and is a tumble-down, three-story brick house, the lower floor vacant, the second a restaurant and gambling room, and the third occupied as a joss house. Beside the front door, pasted on the cracked bricks, are hundreds of little slips of pink and yellow paper, covered with Chinese prayers of the day, and as a fresh supply is pasted on daily without the formality of removing the old ones, you can readily imagine that the accumulated layers of years is very considerable.

The new joss is Kwan Ti, or Kwan Kung, the Master Kwan, as he is called here, the Chinese god of war and the diety most commonly worshiped in China today. This god is believed to have the American Chinaman under his special protection, and legends are current of his appearance at various times to protect his worshipers in the new world.

Against the rear wall, in the front room of the new joss house, is a shrine. This consists of a substantial framework of carved and painted wood, extending from about three feet from the floor almost to the ceiling. A table in front of this constitutes the altar, upon which is spuatted the idol, a most ferocious-looking creature, all heavy with gilding and blue, red, and yellow coloring. Behind him are three panels. Upon the center one, in gilded letters, carved in relief, appear three Chinese legends. Within the frame suspended on the wall hang paper scrolls bearing pictures of the divinities.

On the ledge within the frame is a large box to hold incense and a small gilt shrine, containing an idol, an image of Buddha. At each end of the ledge, standing outside of the frame, are silvered glass vases, holding branches of artificial flowers, while other vases of the same kind are used as candlesticks, and one standing in the center is for incense.

The gilded, carved altar screen is reputed to be the most costly and beautiful piece of hand wood carving ever imported into the country. It represents numerous divinities, and the dragon of China bears a prominent part in the different groupings. From the ceiling hang countless banners of heavy silk in red and blue, and all bearing the dragon in gold embroidery. Green, blue, pink and yellow boards with Chinese writing, evidently prayers, cover the walls; various colored lanterns hang among the banners.

One side of the room contains a furnace, built into the wall, and a long row of pigeon holes, filled with bits of paper, like those pasted on the brick wall beside the street door.

SOCIETY GIRL AT THE THROTTLE.

Runs an Engine With a Millionaire's Son For Stoker.

There is no end of good natured gossip in Burlington, N. J., over a recent escapade of Miss Natalie McNeal, the 19-year-old daughter of Andrew McNeal, millionaire and a society favorite. The young woman defeated Edward Burd Grubb, Jr., nephew of the ex-minister to Spain and son of Millionaire Harry B. Grubb, in a two mile bicycle race and exacted two hours' work as a penalty.

A yard engine of the Pennsylvania company is chartered by Mr. McNeal to shunt cars in his foundry yard. Jerry, the engineer, knows Miss McNeal. The young woman ordered Grubb to enter the cab of the engine and then followed.

"Now, you'll have to do the firing," she said to Grubb, "and you must keep on a good head of steam, for we are going to make some quick runs." Then she pulled the throttle wide open, and the locomotive sprang forward. The young millionaire took off his coat and started to heave in coal.

Finally Miss McNeal expressed a desire for more space than the foundry yard afforded and took the locomotive out on the main track. She sounded a few shrill blasts of the whistle, which brought the occupants of the nearby houses to their doors. Then, with the big bell clanging and the whistle tooting, the engine sped down the main line to Burlington.

The tracks run through the main street of the town, and the racket of the bell and whistle attracted widespread attention. There were roars of laughter at the picture young Grubb presented. His white duck trousers were just sufficiently white to show that he was not a regular stoker. The perspiration poured down his face, but he kept manfully at work It was all great fun for the millionaire's daughter, but Grubb didn't enjoy it a bit.

The locomotive ran half a mile past the town, and those who failed to see it pass down were informed of the affair in time to be at the station to greet it on the return trip. Mr. Grubb was kept at work exactly 1½ hours. Miss McNeal then relented and ran the locomotive back to the foundry yard.

Regretfulness.

"If I were a man," said the restless lad, "I'd never give up and be still and sad. Were my name but known in the lists of life I'd never say die till I'd won the strife. But who will challenge the steed of youth, Though his heart be brave and his motto 'truth' There's work to be done in this life's short span. But, alackaday, I am not a man!"

"If I were a boy," says the toiler gray, "I'd fashion my lot in a better way. I'd hope and labor both day and night And make ambition my beacon light. Were my bark but launched upon youth's bright stream I'd head to the one my draft nor cream Till I reached the haven of peace and joy. But, alackaday, I am not a boy."

—Washington Star.

An important message often comes by telegraph, but the most important message that ever was delivered to mankind has been given to them through the newspapers. It is given again in this article.

It is the information that 98 per cent. of all cases of consumption can be completely and permanently cured. There is no doubt about it. The statement is not made recklessly, but after the experience of thousands has made it an indisputable fact. Consumption is not a disease of the lungs. It is a disease of the blood, which in weak lunged people manifests itself by the formation of tubercles in the lungs and the wasting away of lung tissue. The cure for consumption is simple. It consists in the administration of a medicine that will assist the lungs in throwing off tuberculous matter, and that will cleanse the system so that this refuse matter will be replaced by strong, healthy tissues. That sounds like a very simple operation, and yet consumption baffled the combined medical skill of the whole world for hundreds of years. Consumption was considered incurable until the advent of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This great remedy is the most wonderful blood purifier and strengthener that the world has ever known. It is the result of years of study and experiment, by a scientific physician and has been tested in every way by him for over 30 years. It has an unbroken record of success. It cures a great variety of diseases, because almost all diseases have their origin and support in impurity and weakness of the blood. As long as a man's blood is rich and pure, he is in no danger from diseases. The blood is the medium through which food is carried from the digestive system to all of the tissues of the body. If it carries impure things, or an insufficient quantity of good things, trouble will ensue. There is nothing about that so very hard to understand. It is perfectly plain and natural and rational. The "Golden Medical Discovery" puts the digestive system in perfect order, purifies and enriches the blood and so puts the whole body into perfect tune.

It is a conspicuous fact that many large and beautiful shade trees of this city are dead or dying. Why this should be so remains to be explained. Some lay the blame to pavements, contending that solid bodies of brick or asphalt keep the nourishment from the roots, others say the trouble could be traced to the gas mains which leak more or less at some joints. To the property owner who has taken pains to raise his few shade trees only to find his work in vain this is an interesting question.

LOST TWO MORE GAMES.

Jackson	21	9	12	.429
Washington	25	8	17	.320

Fort Wayne is either playing poor ball or is playing in hard luck. We do not know which, but certain it is that our club is getting the worst of it right along and fails to get up in the standing of clubs. We now hold fifth place. In the two games at Wheeling on Saturday the club of that city beat our home club twice and yesterday they administered two more defeats to our boys. In the ninth inning of the first game with Wheeling yesterday, with the bases full, and the score 7 to 6 and two men out, Rickert came to bat, but could not make the necessary hit to win the game. Fisher played a phenomenal game at second, accepting twelve chances with but one error, the only he has made thus far. In the second game Tebeau's home run drive saved the Fort Wayne's from a shutout. The scores of the two games yesterday were as follows:

First game:

INNINGS.	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	R.
Wheeling	0	0	3	3	0	0	0	0	1	7
Fort Wayne	2	0	0	1	0	1	1	0	1	6

NOTED PUGILISTS.

John L. Sullivan and Other Ring Celebrities Will be Here.

The coming to Princess rink on Saturday evening, August 22, of John L. Sullivan on his farewell tour is going to bring out one of the biggest crowds of the season. This is positively his last appearance and he is accompanied by the greatest array of fighters and wrestlers that ever went on the road. Sullivan boxes with big Tom Chandler, and Parson Davies is the referee. There is also Don Creedon, champion middleweight of Australia and heavyweight champion of England; Tom Tracy, champion welterweight of Australia and England; Tommy White, champion featherweight of the west; Joe Bertrand, the celebrated California featherweight; Billy Murphy, champion lightweight wrestler, and a half dozen others. Special attention will be given to the performance so they may be attended with perfect propriety by the ladies, giving them a rare opportunity of seeing an excellent exhibition of the sport so much enjoyed by their male relatives. John L's many friends in this city will no doubt make his farewell appearance here a memorial one.

PUBLIC WORK.

Short Session of the Board Yesterday Afternoon.

A petition from Berry street property owners for the repair of sidewalks on that thoroughfare was received by the board of public works yesterday afternoon and the work will be done shortly.

The contract for paving with brick the alley between Wayne and Berry streets, from Clinton to a point 182½ feet east, was awarded to C. E. Moeller & Co., at $2 24 per lineal foot. Metropolitan block will be used in doing the work.

Adolph Foellinger asked for and was granted permission to raise and relay by private contract the sidewalk in front of lots 77 and 78, Original plat.

Ed. Powell's application for a sewer builder's license was deferred until the next meeting, or until the applicant shall successfully pass an examination as to his capability. The present board is very strict in regard to the character and capability of persons wishing license as sewer builders. The improper performance of work is apt to involve the city in suits to recover damages, and the board's stringency is very commendable.

A petition asking for permission to cross through the alley in the rear of lot 56, Fairfield's addition, in order to drain said premises into a private sewer, was granted.

The city civil engineer's plans and specifications for setting up the fountain at the park approach to the West Main street bridge, were examined and approved. The fountain is a large one of handsome design, and will be an ornament to the locality where it is to be placed.

$400,000 A YEAR.

Professor Munyon's Wonderful Success as an Advertiser.

Honesty the Keynote—Quantity vs. Quality of Circulation—About Directories—Publishers Are Honest—Editing Advertising.

Prof. J. M. Munyon, of Munyon's Homeopathic Home Remedy company, netted $267,000 from his business last year, the fourth in its history. He attributes this quick, widespread success to his advertising, backed up by the merit of his medicines

Professor Munyon is interesting, not only because of the size of his advertising expenditures, but because it is confined entirely to readers, and because he has induced some of the very foremost newspapers of the United States to distribute his remedies from their offices under their sanction.

Being asked what he considered the fundamental reason for his great success as an advertiser, he replied:

"Honesty. We have built our success purely on that basis. Telling the truth and telling it continually. Telling it in the best newspapers and telling it in generous space. Druggists, jobbers as well as retailers, have never handled remedies that sold so rapidly, and they attribute this immense sale largely to advertising."

"Your success then is a distinctly newspaper success?"

"Entirely so."

"Do you propose to diminish or increase your newspaper advertising?"

"I propose to increase it."

"You do not think, then, that there is anything that could take the place of newspaper advertising?"

"No."

"In using newspapers, is it your custom to do a great deal with the best, or to scatter your appropriation among them?"

'I believe in using only the best"

"You use some auxiliary advertising, of course, such as cards for drug stores?"

"Very few"

"Why not?"

"I believe that a great deal of money has been lost that way."

'In picking out newspapers, do you choose those with large circulations first?'

"Most invariably."

'Do you ever consult newspaper directories for circulation?'

"Every day."

"Have you ever refused to advertise in a newspaper or discontinued advertising in a newspaper because it refused to give its average actual circulation?'

"Yes."

'Very frequently."

"Yes."

"How much, in round numbers, would you say newspapers have lost of your advertising by refusing to give actual figures?"

'Five per cent."

"Your daily paper expenditures average how much?'

"About $33,000 a month."

"Then you withhold $20,000 of advertising from newspapers because they do not give their actual circulation?"

"Yes."

'Do you have a rule that you will not advertise in papers that do not give their actual average circulation?"

"That is an invariable rule that I have given to my contracting clerk."

"Are you ordinarily willing to accept publishers' statements when made in actual figures?"

'Yes, for I believe the publishers think it best to tell advertisers the truth, as it is the most fatal mistake a paper can make to secure a liberal advertiser and then lose him by any false statement on the part of the paper."

"How many papers do you use?'

"Several hundred."

"That is a small percentage. To what do you attribute it?'

"To the honesty of the publishers themselves I think that very often advertisers are deceived by publishers on account of their own selfish actions, and I have found that where papers are treated fairly we are met in a kindred spirit."

I have endeavored to make my advertisements truthful, and so simple that a child might understand and the most skeptical be convinced of my sincerity. In other words, I believe a person should have faith, absolute faith in his business in order to imbue the public with confidence. We have endeavored to win the public confidence by doing a little more than we promise."

"That sounds to me like a definition of the policy of your advertising rather than the writing of it?'

"Yes, it is the policy, but the writing is the outgrowth of it My greatest difficulty has been in getting writers who would tell the story in such a way that the public would believe it. They could write essays, but they could not make converts. They chill the reader rather than warm him towards us In other words, we endeavor to come in close touch with the reader and converse with him as though he were here in person"

Kasten & Kohlmeyer, manufacturers of the Regular Spanish 5c cigar, have removed their factory to No. 248 Calhoun street, where they will be pleased to greet all their friends. 18eod3t

May Yet Reach It.

The safe return of Dr. Nansen from the far north revives interest in the subject of Arctic exploration and it can live anywhere that an Eskimo can exist.

The field has not been abandoned, the Jackson-Farnsworth crew is still out, though the Windward, the steamer that brought back Dr. Nansen, has gone to Franz Josef land after the party. The members of that expedition, when they return, will add to the great store of information about Arctic affairs brought back by Dr. Nansen, who based his theories on certain indications given by the Jeannette expedition. Following in the tracks of predecessors, some fortunate explorer may yet reach the pole.

Effect of Free Coinage.

It is often said, "put a dollar's worth of silver in a dollar," as if that were solid wisdom. Such a proposition requires that silver shall have the value of money before it is made money! Would gold have the same value if the coining of it into money were prohibited, and its use limited to the arts? Is it possible for either silver or gold to have the same value if limited to use in the arts, that they have or would have if given full monetary use in addition to their use in the arts? Of course not. Over 70 per cent. of the value of gold comes from its monetary use, and less than 30 per cent. from its use in the arts. Silver must have the same mintage right that gold has before it can have the same value. If the right to make bread of spring wheat were taken away, would spring wheat have the same value winter wheat has, or the value that winter wheat would have if bread could be made from that alone? First monetize silver, give back to it its ancient mintage rights, and then if it does not circulate at par with gold, a good reason might be found for changing the coinage ratio, as in 1831, when the weight of the gold coins was changed.

Gail Hamilton Dead.

Gail Hamilton (Mary Abigail Dodge), one of the foremost writers of the time, whose works have been read and admired by millions, is dead, and the world loses one who did much to make it better and brighter and happier.

Her dangerous illness was noticed in yesterday's telegraph columns of THE SENTINEL. Her death occurred last night at 9 o'clock at her home in Hamilton, Mass. Miss Dodge, since her illness in the spring, had appeared in good spirits and had passed considerable time in the open air. She arose apparently quite well Sunday morning, but while eating breakfast was stricken with paralysis. Her physician was immediately summoned. He found her unconscious and she remained in that condition until death came.

Gail Hamilton was a native of the town in which she died, having been born in 1830. At the age of ten years she went to Dr. Clark's private school in Cambridge. She was graduated from Ipswich academy at the age of twenty. In 1851 she went to Hartford as assistant in the Hartford high school. She refused to take the customary examination, but was given the position without doing so. She was also instructor in physical science in this school for several years, and was subsequently governess in the family of Dr. Gamaliel Bailey, of Washington, D. C., the editor of the National Era, to which paper she became a contributor. In 1855-57, she was one of the editors of Our Young Folks, a magazine for children, published in Boston.

From 1870 until a little over a year ago she had lived most of the time with her cousin, Mrs. James G. Blaine, in Washington. In course of this daily contact with the Blaine family Miss Dodge was led into a very close friendship with Mr. Blaine, and at the death of the latter she became his literary executor, being in possession of all his papers and documents of value to her as his authorized biographer. She was engaged, as frequently as her health would permit, on Mr. Blaine's biography from the time of his death until her illness of last year, and it is thought her untiring devotion to the work was instrumental in bringing about prostration and eventual death.

Gail Hamilton was a frequent contributor to prominent magazines and her published works, written in a witty and aggressive style, consists largely of selections from her contributions. In 1887 she wrote a series of letters on civil service reform for a New York paper. Letters on a wide range of public questions, written for the Boston Journal, were widely copied throughout the United States. Miss Dodge's one novel, 'First Love is Best," had not the success which attended some of her other works. During recent years she engaged in political writings and many famous review articles and political interviews have been accredited to her which have roused much warm discussion and have exerted more or less influence upon national politics.

Japan caught a tartar when she conquered the island of Formosa, that is to say, when she was supposed to conquer it. The Japan-China war has been over more than a year, yet Japan is tugging away at Formosa still, unable either to hold on or let go. The final outcome is not uncertain, however. Japan will surely subdue the whole of Formosa if the jealous European powers will let her alone. When the conquest is complete, the victorious and belligerent Japs will turn their attention to something else. That is the extension of their power scattered among the islands of the sea. Formosa will be the stepping stone to this extension. The island empire of the east will require still more islands to constitute it the great power it deserves of being. Nothing less than the annexation of some of the south sea islands will satisfy the governing ambition of now Japan. Why not? Is there any more a why Japan, as well as England and Germany, should not take possession of islands in the southern ocean that have not been already appropriated by greedy European powers. American sympathy is with the Japanese.

Specimens of pure American wit from the comic papers, that smile was sent by lightning yesterday. The lightning is doubtless as much to be expected under the circumstances."

Public School Lectures.

It is a good sign that these are increasing. In some of the cities the generosity of private individuals of wealth enables the working people to attend lectures in the halls of the public school houses at stated intervals during the winter season. Some of the state legislatures have made provision for the appropriation of small sums from the public school fund to pay the lecturers. This is perhaps the best way. Cities in states in which no such provision is made for free lectures to the people ought to bring the matter before their legislatures without delay.

New York state has such a law. The report of the lecture course in New York city during the past season shows that 1,040 admirable lectures were given to the people, chiefly at the public school buildings. In most instances the speakers received a very trifling fee, but there was no charge for admission to the people. The audiences at these sittings were literally an uprising of the people. Men in their working clothes, those who had only passed long enough to swallow a bit of food after coming home from their 10 hours' toil, hastened to the hall to get good seats. The attendance at all the lectures for the season reached the remarkable figure of 392,733. Next year it will probably be 500,000. The people almost climb over one another in their eagerness to learn.

In the large cities the audience at the public school free lecture is always composed of many foreigners, those who particularly need instruction in American ways—such of our ways as are good, that is. The course in New York city included lectures on American history and American statesmen, on our national government and city government, also on civil service reform. Natural science, art, literature and music received a full share of attention. So also did foods, hygiene, care of the eyes, teeth, etc. One of the most commendable topics of instruction in some of the cities was alcohol and its effects on the human system. Every department of instruction has had justice done it by the many lecturers except perhaps one. That is the department of ethics. It is all very well for common people to understand the use of the microscope, but will that teach them to be honest and kindly, to lead clean, wholesome lives and to live up to the golden rule? That is the teaching the people need today, and it can be given to them without a trace of theology being mixed with it either.

When the bicycle was first invented, it was considered a remarkable achievement for a wheelman to travel 100 miles a day. Now that is nothing at all uncommon for men and not very remarkable for strong women riders. One or two men have accomplished 400 miles in 24 hours and not a few have made 200 miles in that length of time. Much of this increased speed is to be set down of course to improved roads and improved bicycles. No matter whence the increase of speed comes, however, it is just as much of a gain. It has long been known that one man upon a bicycle can outrun a fast trotting horse and keep up the pace much longer. The crowning glory of wheelmen was, however, attained the other day when a sextuplet bicycle outtraveled for a short distance the fastest express train on the New York Central road. Six athletes and expert wheelmen resolved some time ago to make the race. They trained for it especially, and at a given point, near Syracuse, mounted upon a bicycle built for six, they boldly pedaled out abreast of the rushing train. In a half mile spurt they gained four of the lengths of their own machine upon the train. What they could have done in a greater distance could not be ascertained then and there, for they had to slow up for a bridge. But they proved, as far as they went, that man's will and muscle can outdo steam.

An Old Fashioned Walk.

In a past which now seems very far off people used to enjoy walking tours. A journey of from 10 to 30 miles a day, according to the walker's foot and lung power, was thought to be a fine outing.

The bicycle has superseded all that. Now the tours are made awheel. It sounds strange, therefore, to read in Outing an account by Mr. Allen W. Quimby of a tramp which he took through the heart of Pennsylvania one day lately. He calls himself an old fogy, and the name of his paper is "A Fogy On Foot." The advantages of the foot journey, in Mr. Quimby's estimation, are that one can see the beauties of the country he passes through, which can hardly be the case on the wheel, since the rider must be continually looking ahead in the road. If the bicycle rider says, "But you cannot travel anything like as far on foot as on the wheel," our nimble old fogy has answer here also. He shows us how he walked full 60 miles in one day. That would not be bad even for a bicycle touring party.

Our fogy's road lay through the heart of the most fertile region in Pennsylvania, where the farms are bursting with fatness and the Dunkers drive in yellow topped buggies and fasten their clothing with hooks and eyes instead of buttons, deeming the latter sinful. Hence they have come to be known among neighbors not of their faith as "Hook and eye Dutchmen."

Mr. Quimby's sketch makes the reader conclude there is pleasure still in an old fashioned country walk—if one's bicycle is broken, that is.

As soon as the mechanical power hauling wagon is fully developed it will be a great boon to the population of the dry plains of America. In the grazing belts of the west there are millions of acres that furnish herbage for grazing, but which must be irrigated to produce crops. Wood, coal and water are about equally scarce. If a wagon for heavy hauling can be devised to run by petroleum, it will be of great assistance to the farmers and graziers in regions where horse feed and fuel and water are very costly.

What people lack in knowledge of any matter they make up in opinions concerning it, and the more ignorant they are the more opinions they have. The less they know, too, the more obstinately they hold to their opinions.

A man who, like Rev. Dr. Freeman of Haverstraw, has proved himself untrustworthy, holy or otherwise, as the owner proves, more than 500 couples has a grave responsibility on his hands.

WILL SHE ABDICATE?

GROUNDS FOR THE RUMOR THAT QUEEN VICTORIA WILL RETIRE.

Albert Edward May Soon Have to Handle the Reins of Government—Abdication Not Popular With Monarchs in the Past—Some Instances, However.

There seems at last some foundation for the report that Queen Victoria means to abdicate, in which event the Prince of Wales will become king of Great Britain and Ireland and emperor of India. The ground of the rumor is her majesty's alleged intention to pass all her time hereafter at Balmoral or Osborne and to give her eldest son the use of Buckingham palace and Windsor castle. Common sense would indicate that where the pageant is there should so much of power as survives in royalty be also. Moreover, the English theory of constitutional government requires a prime minister to consult the sovereign continually, especially during the sessions of parliament, and such consultation is extremely inconvenient, if not impracticable, when the sovereign persistently remains in a remote corner of the kingdom.

It is not age alone which may lead the queen to lay aside the crown, for, although she has ruled 63 years, or longer than any other English monarch, she is only in the seventy-eighth year of her age, or considerably younger than Lord Palmerston and Mr. Gladstone were when they were for the last time her first ministers. But infirmities and bereavements have so far disabled her that for many years she has evinced an inclination to evade her social duties, and it is scarcely to be presumed that her political functions have been more punctiliously discharged.

It would be easy for the monarchical element in the British constitution to shrink into a legal fiction, as so many of its prerogatives have shrunk, and the fact that the throne has not undergone effacement in recent years, but, on the contrary, seems firmly buttressed by the national good will, is due unquestionably to the tact, activity and popularity of the Prince of Wales. He has long borne much of the burden of royalty, and it will seem but just that he should wear the crown.

It is a curious and interesting fact that there has never been an example of voluntary abdication on the part of an English sovereign, although six rulers have been deposed, or sown, if we count Lady Jane Grey, who was uncrowned and reigned nine days. There have been many acts of self renunciation, on the other hand, on the part of monarchs on the continent of Europe. The memorable surrender of all his titles and powers by Emperor Charles V is not the only instance of the kind in the annals of the Spanish monarchy. Philip V abdicated in favor of his son, Don Luis, but on his son's death resumed the crown. There is, however, no precedent in France for the two abdications of Napoleon I, and those of Charles X and Louis Philippe were made under pressure. This can hardly be said of the abdication of the Austrian throne by Emperor Ferdinand I in December, 1848, for his generals had just beaten a Hungarian army and recovered Vienna. He was doubtless influenced less, by the example of Emperor Charles V than by that of Emperor Mathias, who on the eve of the Thirty Years' war renounced the crowns of Bohemia and Hungary in favor of a cousin. It is the house of Savoy which has furnished the greatest number of instances of abdication. In 1434 Amadeus VIII made his son lieutenant general and retired to a monastery, and subsequently he definitely renounced his dukedom in order to become pope under the name of Felix V. His grandson, Amadeus IX, was impelled by his bodily sufferings to abdicate in favor of his wife Yolande. In 1780 Victor Amadeus II, then king of Sardinia, abdicated in order to marry the Countess of San Sebastian, at whose instigation he subsequently tried to regain the crown. In 1802 Charles Emmanuel IV, having been forced by the French to retire to the island of Sardinia, renounced his throne in favor of his brother, Victor Emmanuel I, who in turn abdicated in 1820 sooner than embroil himself both with his own people and with Austria. His next successor but one, Charles Albert, also abdicated, after his defeat by the Austrians at Novara, in favor of his son, Victor Emmanuel II.

After all, however, there have been few instances in which abdication was so entirely voluntary as it would be in the case of Queen Victoria. Her subjects are warmly attached to her, and no open remonstrance would be made should she insist upon retaining the outward guise of sovereignty as long as she continues to live. Those Englishmen who are republicans at heart would doubtless be glad to see pass into abeyance those powers of supervision, regulation and interposition still asserted in theory for the crown and upon which the queen's husband, Prince Albert, laid so much stress. For that very reason her majesty may deem it a duty which she owes to her descendants to transfer to her eldest son official functions which she is no longer able or willing to perform before the public mind becomes accustomed to see them divorced from royalty.—New York Sun.

TO EXPLORE THE CANYON.

The Dangerous Undertaking of a Colorado River Steamboat Captain.

Captain J. A. Mellon, who has commanded a steamboat on the Colorado river for 30 years, has proposed to descend the Green river and then go through the Grand canyon of the Colorado in a small skiff. The boat was built to order, is pointed at each end and has a wide, flat bottom, which prevents it drawing more than four or five inches of water. Four Indian boatmen will accompany him.

The region which he intends to explore is little known and is thought to be rich in mineral wealth. The distance is about 1,000 miles, and he thinks he could make it in ten days if he did not stop to look for game and minerals.

In 1869 Captain Powell, chief of the United States geographical survey, attempted to make the trip. He spent four months on the journey, lost several men, had his boats wrecked and was finally forced to abandon the venture. Captain Mellon says that Captain Powell did not have the right sort of boats, to which fact his failure was due.—Philadelphia Times.

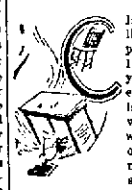
A CHICAGO TRILBY.

MARTHA HARDY IS CONTROLLED BY A SPIRIT.

IN HER TRANCES SHE STARTLES BY A SWEETNESS OF VOICE.

In Her Natural State She Can Not Sing at All—She Has Startled the City by Her Strange Revelations—Locates the Long Lost Chicora.



CHICAGO has a real, live Trilby in the person of Martha Hardy, a sixteen-year-old Ravenswood girl, who is said to do feats when in trance which rival the best of Svengali's hypnotic efforts. She says the source of most of her mysterious talents is the spirit of her sister.

Martha Hardy in the natural state has a childish voice of no power or sweetness, but the neighbors say that when she is "under control" the purity and range of her soprano are marvelous. She is not a politician, but she delivers political orations which, she says, are inspired by the shade of Carter H. Harrison. She is a mere schoolgirl, but she writes poetry when in trance and declares that Eugene Field is the celestial bard who inspires her.

She also says she has located the lost Chicora while under her sister's spirit guidance, and is ready to point out the spot where the wreck lies and the location of the bodies of the crew if any one will provide her with a pass or a ticket to Benton Harbor.

The suburb of Ravenswood and the citizens of Belmont avenue, where Miss Hardy frequently visits, are all wrought up over the strange revelations of the girl and the wonderful change which has come to her own personality within the last few weeks.

About three months ago a younger sister of Martha died. The family often sat and talked of her evenings. On one occasion, while they were gathered about a table at the home of Mrs. G. W. Krelle, where Martha and her mother and married sister were visiting, the elder sister remarked that she believed a good medium could call up her sister's spirit. Martha was sitting thoughtfully by the table with her hands upon it. Suddenly, those who were present say, the heavy table began to sway back and forth. While her friends were watching Martha they saw her eyes become glassy and her form shaken as if she had been seized with a chill.

"Speak to me," said Martha. "If you are the spirit of my dead sister make it known by rapping on the table."

Immediately, her friends say, there came a series of raps. Martha remained in the first trance only a short time and received no further communication on that night. When she came out of the trance she was hysterical. Martha's elder sister is the wife of William S. Frisby, of the firm of Lawson & Frisby, Ravenswood, and it is at her home that some of the most marvelous of the manifestations have occurred.

The manifestation which is said to have revealed the location of the long-lost Chicora came only a few nights ago. The girl and her mother were visiting in Ravenswood at the time. Martha's eyes grew suddenly glassy and her form began to shake. She put her hand over her eyes as if shading them from the sun. A minute afterward she began to repeat to them the story of the sinking of the steamer as she said it was appearing to her. The boat was within 800 feet of the pier, she said, but all its lights were out, so that those who were watching from the shore could not see it.

The girl repeated every detail of the sinking, and described the present location of the wreck and the place in the hull where the bodies of the crew were lying. When she came out of the trance she told those about her she was sure she would recognize the spot in a moment. She has never been across Lake Michigan in her life, it is said.

Previous to the possession of the girl by the spirits she seldom had been known to sing, and possessed an inferior child's voice. Now, the neighbors say, the girl has one of the most remarkable soprano voices they have ever heard, and when she is in one of her trances the feats of Trilby would be insignificant in comparison.

One of the feats which the girl performs almost every night is the writing of poems in German, French, and Swedish, although she herself understands only English. In the writing of her poems she asserts she is moved by the spirit of Eugene Field.

A few nights ago she delivered a political speech which she declared was dictated to her by the spirit of Carter Harrison.

MARVELOUS CURE.

A Man Suffered from Lack Jan 24 Years, but Is Recovering.

McKeesport (Penn.) Times: A cure that borders on the miraculous has been effected in the case of Wallace White, a well-known carpenter of this city, who had suffered from lockjaw for almost a quarter of a century. Mr. White has just arrived home from the hospital and the improvement in his condition is simply wonderful and a complete surprise to his many friends here and elsewhere.

When a boy of 5 years, Mr. White was attacked with a fever. The disease settled in his jaws and locked them tight. For twenty years he has been unable to eat anything except food which had been especially prepared for him and which he forced into his mouth through an opening made by the extraction of several teeth. While he could converse in a way with his friends it was an extremely difficult matter to understand him. After consulting with numerous specialists he left several weeks ago for Chicago, where he has been treated by a noted physician with great success.

Mr. White was kept on the operating table for eight consecutive hours, during which time an incision was made in his cheek and the jaw bones sawn apart. The bones had become joined and had grown together during the progress of the fever. Mr. White then gave a strip of his skin from his breast which was pasted over the parts that had been operated upon. He is now able to use his jaws and his teeth as well as any person who has never had the misfortune to go through such a siege. One more operation will make the cure complete.

A Curiosity of India.

The "tree of a thousand images," which grows in Thibet, has leaves which have their centers marked with images of men, animals, birds, fares, etc. Some authorities claim that some are marked with letters and figures.

Two twelve-year-old lads in Sutton, England, contrived to get some candy out of a slot machine, without dropping in the usual coins. Remorse then attacked them, and they drowned themselves.

An Artist's Bride-to-Be.

Miss Elizabeth Gardner, who is soon to become the wife of the celebrated French artist, Bouguereau, has herself attained considerable celebrity as an artist, both in this country and in France. It is nearly twenty-five years since she sent her first painting to the Paris Salon, and she was the first American woman to gain, as she did in 1885, the Salon medal. Miss Gardner is a native of New Hampshire and a woman of attractive personality. As an art student in Paris she was one of Bouguereau's pupils and an intimate friend of his family. The artist-bridegroom is now about seventy-two years old.

A National Dance.

"Pa," said Imogene Plumbottle, "isn't the polka a national dance?"

"A national dance?" replied old Plumbottle. "Let's see. A step forward—then two steps backward. Yes I guess it is a national dance, judging from the degeneracy of the American nation."

A Beauty Deported.

Mrs. Pauline Reitel, young, pretty and vivacious, left her husband in Geneva, Switzerland, and came to America to meet the man she really loved. The Ellis Island bureau of immigration detained her and she has been returned to Europe. Thus is shattered one of the prettiest romances of the year.

Mrs. Reitel and her husband could not agree, and so they signed an agreement to live free and independent of one another. Mrs. Reitel had a friend in America—M. Diloido Giraud, son of a wealthy French distiller. She had met M. Giraud in Geneva and the young people had fallen in love at once. Now that she had left her husband forever, she reasoned, why should she not fly to M. Giraud? And so she boarded the steamer, came to America, and, almost within calling distance of the young man, was arrested and detained under the immigration laws.

M. Giraud came to the board office to plead for the woman he loves. She entreated the board most pitifully for her liberty, but the officials were obdurate.
